SWIMMING BATHS TO BE PROVIDED

Govt. Statement On The Bathing Facilities To Be Provided

Provisions For Principal Beaches

Government is to provide purified salt water public swimming baths at North Point, Kennedy Town, Lai Chuk Kok and Tai Wan. Government will construct bathing pavilions at Repulse Bay, Stanley, Cafeteria Beach and a beach to be decided later and will set aside areas on these beaches for the erection of tents...there will be no private huts on less accessible beaches.

These are the main points in an official statement issued by Government yesterday in which it was also announced that the construction of private bathing huts on the four main beaches will not be allowed.

The statement of Government policy, which follows, was issued by Government of the report of the Special Committee of the Urban Council appointed in November, 1946, to consider and make recommendations as to the future use, development and control of bathing beaches, is as follows:—

Swimming Baths
Government will provide purified salt water public swimming baths at North Point and Kennedy Town on the Island and at Lai Chuk Kok and Tai Wan in Kowloon. If the demand is not met by this provision similar additional facilities near the foreshore will be provided later. After public needs have been met associations and clubs may be allowed to construct similar pools if land is available.

Facilities On Principal Beaches

Government will construct public bathing pavilions on the beaches at Repulse Bay and Stanley on the Island and at Cafeteria Beach and one other easily accessible beach (to be decided later) in the New Territories. These pavilions will provide the amenities recommended in the report of the Urban Council.

French Finances In Bad Shape

Paris, June 21.

The French financial situation was described in well-informed circles today as more acute than at any time since the early twenties when, after two years of difficulties, Raymond Poincare, (then Prime Minister and Finance Minister) succeeded in re-establishing the franc in 1926 after major devaluation. The Treasury's cash resources were reported to be down to 12 billion francs, and new austerity and economy proposals were finally adopted by the council of ministers presided over by the President of the Republic M. Vincent Auriol, this morning, to cope with the critical situation.

The Government is expected soon, among other measures, to requisition French-owned dollar securities. Total dollar securities owned by French citizens, it was learned here, amount only to about US$300,000,000.

This sum is not enough to make much difference to France's dollar position, but the Government is determined to apply requisitioning to show that it is scraping the bottom of its own drawer before asking for further help from the United States.

Subsidies To Go

The Government subsidies which have kept down prices of bread, milk and certain agricultural supplies, including fertilizers, were to be abolished under the new austerity tax and economy proposals which were put forward by the Finance Minister, M. Schumann.

Other Beaches

Government does not favour the Urban Council's recommendation that the construction of privately-owned huts should be allowed on the less accessible beaches. Instead, Government has decided that on these beaches no private building will be allowed but that huts of a suitable type, designed for which may be invited on a competitive basis, will be built.

The Trooping Of The Colour

His Majesty King George VI, accompanied by the Princess Elizabeth, in action arriving on the Horse Guards Parade to attend the Trooping of the Colour on June 12th—London's most impressive military ceremony, which was revived this year on the King's "official" birthday.

Thirty-two former Japanese vessels, mostly escorts and destroyers, averaging 1,000 tons, will sail from Sasebo, Kyushu, for delivery to China, Russia, the United States and Britain.

Each of the four powers will receive eight ships decided by lots drawn in Tokyo.

Turning over of the former warships is considered part of the demilitarization process and the cost of the ships will not be deducted from the Japanese reparations bill.

Later deliveries will bring the total number of escorts and destroyers allotted to 92.

Japanese crews will deliver the ships for the Soviet to the Siberian port of Nakhodka, three days sailing from Kyushu.

China's portion will go to Shanghai, Britain's to Hong Kong, while the United States' share will be delivered as directed by the Navy Department.

It was her first appearance on horseback at an official ceremony. She is here mounted side-saddle, though she usually rides astride, having learned both styles at the beginning of her equestrian training. (Associated Press photo).

Govt. To Rent Part Of Proposed Building

The Hong Kong Government will rent a portion—up to 50 per cent of the new building projected for the Old City Hall site which the Bank of China bought on April 14 for $3,745,000 at a public auction, the "Sunday Herald" learned authoritatively yesterday.

The "Sunday Herald" was told that one of the conditions of sale was that Government have an option to rent up to half the building to be constructed, at a mutually agreed rental.

Plans for the Bank's new building have not yet been drawn up. Bank officials disclosed yesterday, adding that they themselves have no knowledge of the structure the Bank's Head Office plans to erect.

They believed that it would be some time yet before work on the site is started.

RICH, BUT DIED IN RAGS

Capetown, June 21.

Alexander McIntosh, 77, who died in rags two months ago, left £5,100, more than £16,000, in excess of estimates.

The excess is made up of shares in Canada and England, his will showed today. His money will go to beneficiaries in Britain.—Associated Press.

HONG KONG AID TO FLOOD VICTIMS

While reports of Kwangtung's devastating floods over a wide area, particularly in the territories through which run the East, West and North rivers, continue to pour in, Hong Kong's Chinese community has come out in an enthusiastic and spontaneous response to aid the distressed.

Chinese commercial and industrial organisations, guilds and associations, newspapers and private firms and individuals are all taking part in fund-raising campaigns for flood victims. Considerable sums have already been sent to the Tung Wah Hospital, responsible for distributing the relief money to the different relief units in Canton.

Mr. Aw Boon Haw, the Tiger Balm King, sent $20,000 and a large supply of Tiger Balm for medical relief.

Today, the leading Chinese vernacular newspaper, Wah Kiu Yat Po will lead the bigger fund-raising campaigns by contributing the entire day's sales, followed by the well-known Kiangau Restaurant which will contribute the proceeds of the next five days to flood relief.

Some readers of the Wah Kiu Yat Po have already booked copies of today's issue. The Nanyang Bros. Tobacco Co. sent a cheque for $30,000 for a single copy. Others paid from $6 to $300.

Strong winds and heavy rain hit Shanghai this afternoon sending the mercury down ten degrees from the noon high of 85 degrees. United Press.

Shanghai Safe

Shanghai, June 21.

"Carol" is heading for Amoy at 12 knots but may by-pass Shanghai, according to an announcement by Shanghai Observatory.

Manila Flooded

Manila, June 21.

The U.S. Navy weather office predicted today that "Carol" would strike the northeast coast of China in the Amoy-Foochow area about midnight local time with winds of 86 to 90 miles per hour in the centre and 70 m.p.h. within 150 miles.

A weather plane based on Okinawa placed the centre at 0000 GMT at 22.4 N 119.7 E about 150 miles southeast of Amoy, and 40 east of the southern tip of Formosa, which (it said) undoubtedly is getting a husky blow.

Manila, which is nearly 400 miles away, was flooded by 1½ inches of rain which fell between 0800 and 1400 (MT). Six fishermen from the east coast town of Lucena are missing while wide damage resulted from floods in villages along Lamon Bay.

Strong winds are still blowing at northwestern Luzon, but no casualty reports have come in from that area.—Associated Press.

FLOOD WATERS RECEDE

Canton, June 21.

It was reported today that flood waters are receding throughout Kwangtung province, leaving a wide area of devastation and ruined homes.

The first of the CNRRA water-borne relief parties left last night carrying rice, biscuits and medical supplies. The Chinese press reports numerous floating corpses and livestock in the East River area, which was worst hit. Villages in the Waleyung area are entirely inundated.

The Canton authorities estimate that several hundred persons were killed, 600,000 people were rendered homeless and 1,000,000 acres of land flooded. The authorities said that accurate figures were impossible due to disrupted communications.

The Canton authorities estimate that one of the conditions of sale was that Government have an option to rent up to half the building to be constructed, at a mutually agreed rental.

Plans for the Bank's new building have not yet been drawn up. Bank officials disclosed yesterday, adding that they themselves have no knowledge of the structure the Bank's Head Office plans to erect.

They believed that it would be some time yet before work on the site is started.

New World War In Making? Dr. Sun Fo's Sombre Warning

(By Miles W. Vaughn)

Nanking, June 20.
A new world war is in the making in Manchuria where Soviet Russia will try to launch a new puppet state similar to those created in Europe, unless prevented by aroused world opinion led by the United States and Britain. Dr. Sun Fo, Vice-President of the Chinese Republic, told the United Press in an interview:

The veteran Chinese statesman, son of the founder of modern China, who once was an ardent proponent of Chinese-Russian collaboration, bluntly accused Russia of supporting directly Chinese Communist armies which have already gained control of "85 percent of the vast Manchurian domain" and which tonight were reported to have entered the strategic city of Szepingkai on the railway between Dairen and Changchun.

During the course of a long conversation with this correspondent, Dr. Sun made these points:

The present Communist offensive in Manchuria is Russian-inspired and directed.

The Communists are well supplied with former Japanese military equipment which the Japanese surrendered to the Russians who turned it over to their Chinese Red allies.

The Chinese military authorities have ample proof that large numbers of Korean soldiers trained and equipped in the Russian half of Korea were participating in the Communist drive.

The American-trained and equipped government divisions are suffering from a lack of ammunition which they urgently need from the United States "if Manchuria is to be saved."

Help Needed

The Vice-President said that the South Manchurian ports of Dairen and Port Arthur are being used by Chinese Communist armies in Manchuria as ports of entry and exit for military supplies to Communist armies in Manchuria and China proper. Russia has consistently refused to permit the Chinese government to station military forces in these cities, thereby violating the spirit of the Chinese-Russian Treaty of August 1945, which is supposed to regulate relations between the two nations.

Dr. Sun said that help is needed at once from the western powers led by the United States and Britain if Manchuria is to be saved. Help should include not only military supplies and credits but also vigorous political support. A declaration from Washington and London supporting Nanking's position might help but does not take the place of ammunition.

New Conquest

Sun recalled the course of events in Manchuria since 1931 when the former Japanese army began a military campaign which ended in the creation of Manchukuo, saying, "The Japanese conquest in Manchuria undoubtedly was the leading cause of World War II, including the Pacific phases. It was America's vigorous opposition to Japanese control in Manchuria that led to the attack on Pearl Harbour."

"Now we see a new effort at conquest of this rich area, with Soviet Russia taking the place of Japan. Moscow, of course, will deny that the USSR is supporting Chinese Communists

Reinforcements In Tientsin

Tientsin, June 20.
Additional reinforcements arrived in Tientsin today after running the gauntlet of Communist raiders who damaged the Peiping-Mukden railway at 10 places.

The reinforcements, which reportedly included a division to institute the strictest screening. A number of loaded horsecaravans were seen in Peiping streets with tired refugees wandering in search of shelter.

Meanwhile, the richer residents in Peiping flew to Shanghai and Nanking to secure accommodation.

The Ta Kung Pao hints that Communist activities in North China are responsible for the exodus. —United Press.

Nationalist sources said the damage along both arms of the railway radiating from Tientsin was light and was mostly repaired by morning. Beyond Changli, however, the situation was unknown as telephone lines were cut.

Refugees In Peiping

Traffic between Peiping and Tientsin was again thrown off schedule.

Meanwhile, the Chinese reported that the Nationalist garrisons in Khaisen and Thun-hus, 100 and 140 kilometers respectively northeast of Peiping, were sent to Manchuria as reinforcements.

Many inhabitants in the areas around Peiping, who were left unprotected by pulling out Nationalist troops, fled to Peiping itself.

Eight thousand refugees were jammed outside the Chao-yang-men city gate. Housing difficulties and fear of "subversives" caused the liquidation of 10 other Zaitatsu firms to be approved while the dissolution of the remaining firm will be carried out as soon as possible, the Commission's report added.

SIR SIDNEY CAINE

Mr. Sidney Caine, a former Financial Secretary of Hong Kong, was created Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George in the recent Birthday Honours. It was officially stated yesterday.

Mr. Caine, at present Joint Deputy Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies, served in Hong Kong as Financial Secretary from 1937 to 1939.

WAR CRIMES COURT VISITS TSUN WAN

Hearing of the War Crimes trial of Sgt. Tabata Kanji was yesterday confined to a visit by the President and Members of No. 3 War Crimes Court to the Tsun Wan Police Station, which was used by the Japanese during the occupation as a Kempeitai Station.

The Prosecuting Officer and Defence Counsel as well as an accused accompanied the Court on its visit.

In addition to indicating the room in which they alleged they had been tortured, two witnesses also pointed out to the Court the cells in which they had been detained and in which other detainees are alleged to have died.

Tabata is charged with having committed a war crime in that he, at Tsun Wan Kempeitai Station, between July 1, 1943 and Dec. 31, 1944, was concerned in the ill-treatment of Chinese civilians, causing physical suffering to some and death to others.

The trial will be resumed at 10 a.m. tomorrow.

No Reduction In Yarn Price

Unless there is a reduction in the current world price of yarn, there will be no reduction in Hong Kong, it was officially stated yesterday.

The statement was issued to counter incorrect Chinese reports that the Hong Kong Government intended to reduce the price of yarn here.

It was pointed out that Government was already selling yarn here at the lowest possible price.

Tomorrow's Dragon Boat Festival

The Dragon Boat Festival, one of the most picturesque and popular of Chinese festivals, will be celebrated tomorrow.

The Chinese community during the past week has been busily engaged in preparations. Restaurants and tea-houses have been working overtime preparing rice dumplings, the most important item on the menu and without which the festival would not be complete.

Dragon boat races have always been the chief item on the day's programme and in pre-war days, thousands of people flocked to North Point for the contests held between dragon boats from different districts.

Dragon boat races will be resumed this year and five boats will participate in a race which will commence opposite the No. 2 Police Station in Gloucester Road at 2 p.m. tomorrow.

The dragon boats, which are usually from 50 to 100 feet in length, present a colourful scene as they proceed down the harbour to the accompaniment of beating drums and raucous yell of the rowers who strive their utmost to win, not so much for the sake of the prize at stake as for the honour of their district.

This ancient festival owes its origin to a legend concerning an honest statesman, Wat Yun, who is said to have drowned himself when he despaired of ever being able to persuade his Emperor to introduce certain reforms for the benefit of the masses. When the news of Wat Yun's death became known to the Emperor, the latter, filled with remorse, ordered the imperial dragon boats to search for the body of the drowned statesman.

The body was never found and the story goes on that the spirit of Wat Yun appeared on one occasion and complained of hunger. It was therefore decreed that on the anniversary of the statesman's death, the 5th day of the 5th Moon, dragon boats should sail the rivers and that rice dumplings be cast into the waters as an offering to the departed Wat Yun.

A Dragon Boat race, with boats from Shaukiwan, Wanchai and Aberdeen, will be held at the Chung Sing Benevolent Society on Monday at 3 p.m.

No More Control Of Car Sales

A notice in this week's Government Gazette revokes the Motor Vehicles (Allocation and Control) Order, 1946.

This Order, which was promulgated in November last year, prohibited the sale, registration and transfer of motor vehicles except with the consent of the Director of Supplies, Trade and Industry. It was possible therefore to ensure that cars were sold where they were most urgently required and to restrict black market sales.

Cars are now relatively plentiful and it is considered that there is no further need to maintain control of sales. Export will, however, remain under control for the time being.

The Department of Supplies, Trade and Industry is grateful to car dealers for their cooperation in the working of the control.

YESTERDAY'S FLAG DAY

The Flag Day organised by St. John Ambulance and Brigade yesterday was very successful, although the amount collected will not be known until some time next week, the Brigade's Committee officials told the Sunday Herald last night.

More than 700 school girls and about 50 Chinese and European ladies assisted yesterday in selling Flugs.

PETAIN'S INTRIGUES

More History Comes To Light Wanted War With The Allies

Marshal Petain, at present living out his 91st year in a bleak prison fortress off the coast of France, was prepared to declare war on Britain and the United States in January 1942, according to recently discovered confidential reports made to the Wilhelmstrasse in Berlin by Otto Abetz; former Special Nazi Envoy to Paris.

Allied investigators, it is reported, found the astonishing evidence while "burrowing their way through mountains of Nazi documents in Berlin."

The reports portray Petain as eager to get France on Germany's side even as early as the autumn of 1940, and to declare open warfare against the Allies in January 1942.

Hilter is reported to have refused, because his pride forbade him accepting French military aid. Both Petain and Pierre Laval, his Premier, maintained at their trials that the Montoire Conference, between Hitler and Petain in October 1940, at which the Franco-German policy of collaboration was inaugurated, was initiated by Hitler. Laval himself swore that when he and Petain set out from Vichy under German escort they were ignorant that they were meeting Hitler personally.

Abetz Telegram

But a telegram from Abetz to Ribbentrop dated October 1940 says: "Necessary conditions for common action against England in Africa and an eventual French declaration of war on England would be the establishment of a convention, anticipating the treaty of peace, on the subject of the future distribution of African colonial territories between Continental Powers."

The earliest Nazi documents discovered by the Wilhelmstrasse include a secret memorandum dated Nov. 2, 1940, saying: "In its military aspect the interview between Hitler and Petain had for its goal the effecting of the widest possible Franco-German collaboration in the future war against England."

France's role is to be that of a non-belligerent Power, tolerating on her soil the measures of the German occupants, and supporting those measures as much as possible by providing her own means of defense. If that attitude should entail war with England, France would be ready to accept the consequences." Our Own Correspondent.

SOVIET WALKS OUT

Lake Success, June 20. Soviet members of the United Nations Military Staff Committee walked out of a meeting here today in protest against the Committee's consideration of certain questions put by Colonel William Hodges of Australia at the last meeting of the Security Council.

The Russians held that as the questions—which asked for clarification of certain points in the Military Staff Committee's report—were not formally asked by the Council as a whole, the Military Staff Committee was not obligated to answer them.—Reuters.

Portugal Rounds Up Black Marketers

Lisbon, June 21. Twelve of Lisbon's biggest business men have been arrested at the direct orders of the Portuguese Minister of Economy, Senhor Barbosa. They are charged with having speculated in food prices, and with "other activities calculated to increase the cost of living."

Some weeks ago Senhor Barbosa in Parliament publicly declared war upon profiteers who have forced up prices of essential commodities during recent months, but few thought he would dare to touch the really big operators, many of whom are influential supporters of the regime.

In most continental countries, including Portugal, rich man in prison can obtain special comfortable quarters to himself, and have his food and drink sent in from the city's best restaurants.

In this case, however, not only have the arrested twelve been refused bail, but they are regarded as ordinary criminals awaiting trial in bare cells, while they have been forbidden everything in the way of luxuries from outside.

Most Popular Man

By his action Senhor Barbosa has made himself the most popular man in Portugal with the working classes, who have been struggling to reconcile the Government's refusal to raise salaries with continually mounting prices.

Undeterred by anonymous postal threats of assassination, Barbosa plans still more drastic measures against speculators.

On his black list are believed to be corn millers, and the electric light and power companies, into whose huge profits he has already opened an investigation.

It is obvious that Premier

Salazar is 100 per cent behind the Minister of Economy's war against profiteers, and there is something like a panic of guilty consciousness to be observed today in Lisbon's great commercial centre of Gold Street.—Our Own Correspondent.

Failure Of A Mission

Shanghai, June 21. A National government official visiting Shanghai disclosed last night that a Chinese investigating mission sent to Dairen and Port Arthur were kept eight days on a small Chinese gunboat off Port Arthur and were not permitted by the Russians to land.

Thereafter they were taken on a quick trip to Dairen, returned to the gunboat and put off at a Manchuria port, returning via air from Mukden to Nanking.

The official said the commission was given no opportunity to investigate conditions in either city.

He said the Chinese probably would not protest because of the current critical military situation in Manchuria.—Associated Press.

LOOKING FOR GRANDPOP

Tangier, June 21. An American archaeological expedition has arrived in Tangier to commence a search for remains of the oldest inhabitants of the world—the 100,000-year-old prehistoric man.

Led by Dr. Hugh Honour, of Harvard University and Professor Carlton Coon, the expedition is recommending excavation work in the caves of Hercules which was interrupted by the war.

Preliminary investigations have led the expedition to believe that this is the one place in the world where they will find what countless archaeologists have searched for during the past twenty years.—Our Own Correspondent.

Anglican Church Class-Conscious?

London, June 20. Canon C. F. Kerby of Manchester today charged that the Church of England exercised class distinction in condemning workers' morals.

Speaking at the final session of the Church Assembly, Canon Kerby bitterly attacked a report from the Church of England Youth Council condemning the morals of young factory workers, he said, "to the exclusion of all other classes of society". He asked: "Is it to be wondered that at many of the workers resent this perpetual scolding? Is it surprising that many of them become antipathetic to the Anglican Church and regard her, not as a mother but as a garrulous, bad-tempered shrew who determined to find out as much that is bad in them as possible and to magnify insignificant and natural peculiarities into the category of deadly sin?"—United Press.

Bank For Human Bones

New York, June 20. Establishment of this country's first human bone bank at the New York Orthopedic Hospital was announced by Dr. Bush before the Centennial Meeting of the American Medical Association in Atlantic City.

Bush read a paper explaining that bones and bone chips removed from operations are no longer discarded but can be preserved for later grafting on other patients.

The hospital established its human bone bank last August and since then it has made more than 100 bone grafts with each operation successfully done.

Bones stripped of the hard outer covering are placed in a sterilized bottle and each bottle in turn is encased in another sterilized bottle which is kept in a freezer at 24 degrees below zero Centigrade. By this process, bones can be preserved indefinitely.

Although bone from the patient's own body produces the best results in grafting, it is not always possible, especially when several grafts have to be made. Therefore the bone bank is valuable.

However, it is pointed out that in using other people's bones for grafting, special caution must be taken against infection. Bones from people who have syphilis, malaria and other infectious diseases must be discarded.—Central News.

Britain's Talks With Russia

London, June 21. Britain's overseas trade chief, J. Harold Wilson, left for Moscow to resume trade parleys after telling newsmen he hoped to reach some sort of agreement with Russia.

Wilson took a team of 20 British trade, treasury, food and economic experts for detailed discussions with the Russians on the two nations' respective needs.

Britain has asked the Soviet Union for at least 1,000,000 tons of wheat from their 1947 harvest. This would save more than $100,000,000 from Britain's fast diminishing pool of borrowed dollars. Russia also has been asked to supply timber for housing and industrial needs. Britain would supply machinery, equipment, electrical tools and vehicles.—Associated Press.

HANGED FOR WIFE MURDER

Leeds, June 21. Eric Charles Briggs, a 40-year-old weaver, was hanged today for murdering his wife by stabbing her to death, a crime to which Dennis Wood, a Leeds soldier, confessed at Briggs' trial.

Briggs too, allegedly confessed the crime but denied it while on the witness stand. However, a jury convicted him and his appeal was dismissed after several days' investigation of Briggs' confession which "doubtless" said was "made for notoriety".—Associated Press.

BASE TO REPLACE HONG KONG

Commonwealth Plans For Manus Island Smaller Bases As Screen

Sydney, June 21. First move in the Imperial plan to make Australia a great centre of British military and naval power in the Pacific and Asia has been made with the decision to transfer Manus Island, just north of New Guinea, into one of the world's most powerful bases. A semi-official source states that this development is an indication to the world that the British Commonwealth does not intend to abdicate from its traditionally powerful position in the Pacific and Asia.

The plan provides for the permanent stationing at Manus of a naval squadron, including two aircraft carriers, two cruisers, six destroyers, and three frigates. One carrier, two destroyers, and six frigates, and miscellaneous craft will be held there in reserve.

As an important measure of British-American cooperation America will be granted the right to use Manus' facilities, and agreement has been reached granting reciprocal privileges to Australian and British ships in American bases in the Pacific.

In addition to this naval force, Australia will build up an air force strength of 16 squadrons, comprising 144 aircraft, backed by 430 reserve combat aircraft, and 700 training and other aircraft.

Air Task Force

The regular army strength will be a brigade group, including three infantry battalions, plus an armoured unit plus fixed defences. There will also be two field infantry divisions, and one armoured brigade of militia. The total man power will be: Navy, 14,753; Permanent Army, 19,000; Militia, 50,000; Airforce, 12,652. Total cost of the programme

Europe's Reaction To Marshall

London, June 20. Moscow Radio, broadcasting a statement by Tass, the official Soviet news agency, on Soviet reaction to the Marshall aid-to-Europe plan, said tonight that the proposal was "at present under consideration by the Soviet Government."

Italy formally served notice of its intention to collaborate fully in the Marshall plan in a note delivered by the Italian Ambassador, Signor Alberto Tarichani, to the State Department in Washington today.

The note expressed the Italian Government's interest in and pleasure at the proposals of the United States Secretary of State, Mr. George Marshall.

The Polish Government has not yet been invited to discuss the Marshall plan an official spokesman said in Warsaw today.

"Organised help for Europe is necessary," he added, "but is possible only if these four conditions are fulfilled:

(1) The countries involved should decide for themselves whether help was needed.

(2) Political conditions should be excluded.

(3) The organisation set up under the Marshall plan should work closely with the United Nations.

(4) There should be preference for countries which have been the victims of aggression, including even Germany.—Reuter.

Britain Reassures The U.N.O.

Lake Success, June 20. The British Foreign Secretary, Mr. Ernest Bevin, today assured that the United Nations was not being sidestepped in plans for carrying out General Marshall's European recovery programme.

Mr. Bevin sent his assurance in a personal note, which was delivered to the Secretary General of UN, Dr. Trygve Lie, by the British United Nations delegate, Sir Alexander Cadogan.

The contents of the note were not made public, but the British spokesman said it assured Dr. Lie that the United Nations were "being kept very well in mind" in conversations between British and French officials on the way to implement the Marshall rehabilitation plan.

Mr. Bevin promised to keep Dr. Lie informed of future developments.—United Press.

Women fought it out with women at the Albert Hall on June 6. They tore one another's hair, knocked hats off, swung handbags as clubs, scratched, kicked and buffeted in a clash between Communists and the British Housewives League. This Associated Press photo shows one of the many brawls that took place, in which two men mix it on the floor.

Terrorist Hide-Out Found By Accident

Jerusalem, June 20. Two men fled through an attic and over Tel Aviv roof tops today when a British military search patrol discovered a terrorist workshop near Citrus House.

The workshop was fitted for making arms and explosives, and in the cellar the troops unearthed component parts of automatic weapons. The troops stumbled on the workshop by accident during a routine search.

Police dogs today took part in a country-wide hunt for Major Roy Farran, Assistant Superintendent of the Palestine Police, who escaped last night from Allenby Barracks by climbing through a window.

He had been detained on a "serious charge" in connection with the disappearance of a 17-year-old Jew.

Police of neighbouring countries are cooperating in the search and frontier patrols are on the alert.—Reuter.

Hungarian President Resigns

Genoga, June 20. The Hungarian President, Zoltan Tildy, offered his resignation this morning at a special Cabinet meeting called at 5.30 a.m. local time, M. Laslo Jekely, former Chief of Cabinet to Dr. Tildy, said in Geneva today.

The Hungarian Cabinet refused to accept the resignation of Dr. Tildy who then agreed to stay on a few days longer in order not to upset further the present tense political situation, M. Jekely said.

According to M. Jekely, Dr. Zoltan Tildy said that his position was too much weakened, since Jekely's resignation, for him to hold office much longer.

Mr. Jekely, who refused to return to Hungary from Berne, had planned to leave Geneva tonight by air for New York, but has since been delayed in Geneva. He cannot leave Geneva now before tomorrow morning at the earliest.—Reuter.

No Libel Of Liverpool Labour M.P.

Liverpool, June 20. The Liverpool Court today found that a lawyer, J.R. Bevin, and a printing firm did not libel the Labour Member of Parliament, Mrs. E.M. Bradnock, when they said the Communist Party had a "tacit understanding" with her and her friends that they would not oppose Communism.

Bevin made the charge in an address he made during the 1946 election. It was printed as a pamphlet by T. W. Gornall and Company, a printing firm.

The Court dismissed a counter-suit by Bevin that he was libelled when the "Abercromby Labour Voice" called him a "flashy demagogue with little fundamental knowledge of economic and social problems".—United Press.

Royal Visit To Australia

Sydney, June 21. The British Royal Family is likely to be in Australia in March and April next year, according to semi-official sources.

The weather is then pleasant and most comfortable for visitors from England.

From other sources it is learned today that the Australian tour will be the next, with the Royal Family expected to leave England by sea sometime in January. The tour would be highly popular with Australians, who avidly followed the reports of the South African visit.

Reports of an early Royal visit are increasing in New Zealand. Addressing school children Governor-General Sir Bernard Freyberg said: "I hope, although I know nothing more than you do, that we shall have the pleasure of welcoming the Royal Family here in the near future.—Our Own Correspondents.

BOY KILLED IN BUNKER

Berlin, June 20. Lynn Holzinger, Jr., 10-year-old son of an Associated Press correspondent, was killed today when he fell or jumped into a German air raid bunker which American Army engineers had blown up three hours earlier. It was believed the bunker was still filled with gas from the explosion. The incident occurred while the boy was at play.—United Press.

BRITAIN NOT DYING

Croydon, June 20. Sir Hartley Shawcross, the Attorney-General, tonight refuted opinions printed in some United States newspapers that Britain was "dying," but agreed the problems were "of the gravest kind," and that the nation faced an economic crisis.

"It is a crisis largely because this Government has made itself responsible for what no previous Government has done, for securing full employment and high standards of living," he declared.—Reuter.

ALWAYS THE BOY FOR FUN

Hamburg, June 20. Storm trooper Otto Striebel, who admitted throwing stones into the open mouths of prisoners in Mauthausen concentration camp as a joke because he was "always a boy for fun," was one of four Germans hung here today for war crimes.—Reuter.

The Amazing Mr. O'Casey

Ireland's famous playwright gives his views on Britain

In an exclusive interview with
A. V. SELLWOOD

"Come down and see me. You'll find the house easily enough.... It's the only one in the road without a gate."

When Sean O'Casey, playwright and loved rebel, gives you an invitation like that there's only one way of answering.

You just drop everything and run for the next Devon-bound train.

For the amazing Mr. O'Casey is not only one of to-day's most talked of dramatists... he is himself an extremely good talker.

I called at The Only House In The Road Without A Gate yesterday.

Earlier—at the first night of Sean's new play "Oak Leaves and Lavender"—had been asked by an Irishman "Just what is Sean doing in Devon? And why did he settle in England? Instead of coming home?"

Hates Travelling

To question Number One this answer: Sean is writing and reading plays, books and articles; drinking tea; and watching Tonnes lads play football.

And when he isn't doing any of these things he is helping 12-year-old son Niall cut the hedge, or playing with his seven-year-old daughter Shlyana, or writing letters to his first born—Brian, who is now serving with the Royal Artillery.

To question Number Two Sean replies:

"When I came here I hated the English for the wrongs they did to Ireland. Then I discovered they weren't half such bad people as I had imagined.

"I found myself nearer the centres of art and culture. And as I hate the very idea of travelling.... I stayed on."

And Films Too

You never quite know when this gentle-looking man with the stoop is indulging in a quiet and courteous leg-pull.

And it is certainly difficult to reconcile his self-avowal of "laziness" with the number of plays he writes, and the eager experimentalism in which he sets them.

Well, despite his "laziness" and his "hate of travel" Sean may yet take a holiday in Ireland.... some day.

He hasn't had a holiday for 12 years; has not seen film since

"I didn't like what I saw," he said. "The film industry must picture real men and women, portray real problems, not merely caricature those decline of the public who are raving maniacs...."

The future of the screen?

Mr. O'Casey said the screen must have a future, because, of course, everything has a future.

Eccentricities

He didn't sound very convincing about it. And we had a cup of tea to forget—a very good cup of tea made by his Irish wife Eileen Carey, who played in the first "Juno and The Paycock."

Mr. O'Casey, incidentally, goes to the pictures.

Among the red fields of Devon the passionate writer who found pity and bitterness in hand together during starvation days in the docklands has come to certain conclusions regarding the quaint conceits, dispositions, and eccentricities of our two islands and their people.

Here are some of them: The English language as spoken in England and Ireland:

"You English laugh at Irish pronunciation."

The robust dialect and expression that Shakespeare spoke and wrote is still used in Ireland. It is forgotten in the country that gave it birth.

And The Future

"And what do phrases such as 'suspended animation' mean? Why not say 'standing still' instead of 'so much simpler'?"

The Irish language as the Irish are trying to speak it:

"A Gaelic revival! Splendid. Every nation should have its own language."

"But Gaelic in the schools? I'm not so happy about that. Give the working-class children the means to enjoy life. They'll learn, and appreciate, the Gaelic better on full stomachs."

ENGLAND:

"You're in a mess. You were bound to be after a war, like the last. You will need a new, and intelligent, fanaticism and idealism to get out of it. May be the young will provide the flame, the old won't. An M.P. today must realize he is infinitely less important than a miner or an agricultural worker."

THE DRAMA:

"The theatre should be open to everyone. But it isn't. The present high prices for seats, the absurd centralization of talent and resources must go."

Thrives On Criticism

"You've got to decommercialise the thing. Put the theatre into municipal hands, and give a chance to all the young talent that's bursting to write or act."

"And why keep Shakespeare tucked away at Stratford-on-Avon for the privileged few?"

"Build memorial theatres where the workers can get at them—in London, Birmingham, Liverpool, Wolverhampton—all your big cities. Let the people see and hear his living genius."

Yes. Sean dishes it out. He takes it also.

But, like G. B. S. and more than one or two other Irishmen, he thrives on criticism and argument.

Unswerving Ideals

And through all his changes of dramatic style and presentation there remain consistent and unswerving his love of the common man, his belief in the ultimate goodness of Human Nature.

As an Irishman he can be supremely emotional, rational, patient and near violent by turns.... and still be sincere.

You may hate his views on paper, you may shudder to think what might happen if they were ever put into practice.

But when you listen to him you feel interest, respect.

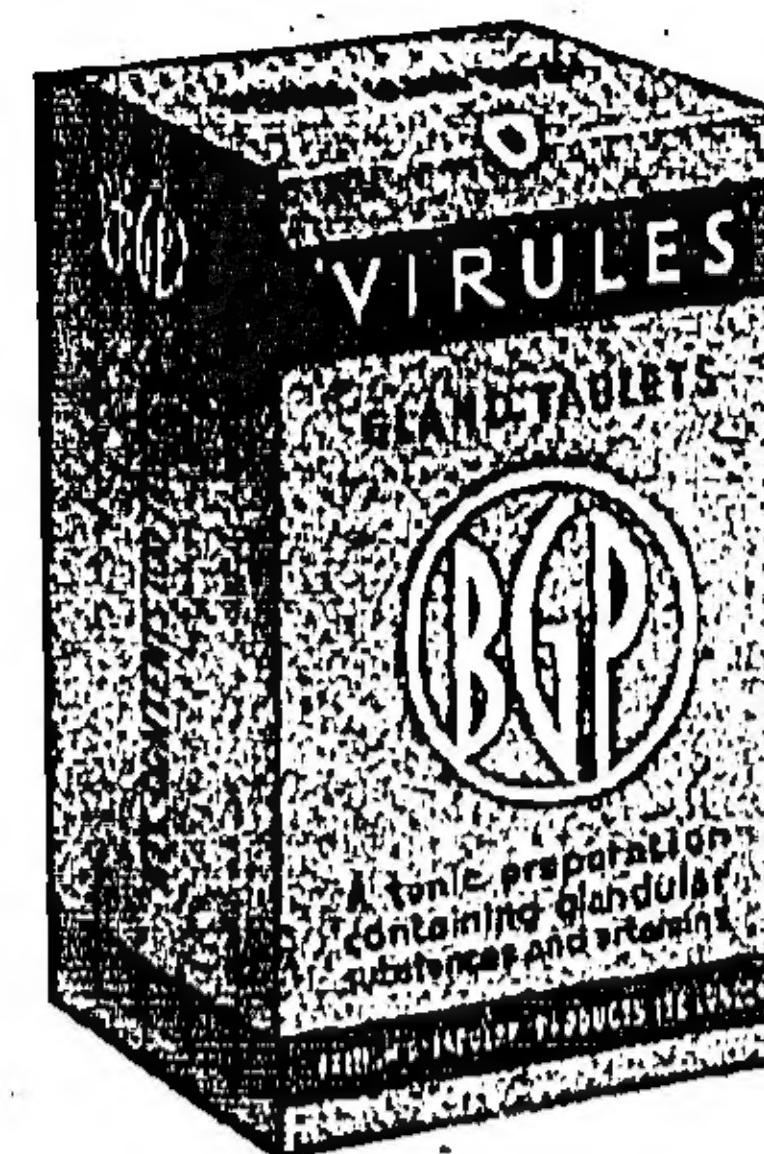

There's something about the amazing Mr. O'Casey.

NORMAN DEVINE, Our Correspondent in Calcutta, here deals with the future of millions of tribespeople who live along the 2000-mile frontier on the North-East of India, and predicts—

There May Be Trouble Where Three Frontiers Meet

Along India's 2,000-mile long north-east frontier, bordering Bhutan, Tibet and Burma, mountainous and arid or heavily jungled, the future of more than a million tribespeople, little influenced by 100 years of British proximity in India, hinges on the political changes being planned in remote Delhi.

Also affected by the British decision to quit India are nearly three million tribespeople within the provincial borders of Assam itself.

So far, these tribespeople have been the charge of British officers responsible to the Governor-General alone.

When he goes, what attitude will they adopt towards the Indian inheritors of power?

Tempting

This is a question whose importance is likely to be underestimated by those who do not know the history of these peoples.

A glance at a map should dispel complacency.

The rich Brahmaputra valley, object of conquerors for centuries before the British came, is a dangerously thin salient—a slim finger caught in the pincers of high mountains to the north and south-east.

Through passes in these mountains came the conquerors of old. In these mountains today dwell warlike tribes who have been held at bay, many think, only by healthy fear of British retaliation.

There are the Akas in the 5,000-foot high inaccessible country east of Bhutan, who once levied tribute from villages in the plains.

Farther east are the Daflas, turbulent and restless mountaineers, whom the Ahoms, tough conquerors from Burma, who ruled Assam for six centuries, never really subdued.

Daflas have kept the British, now, at arm's length. They do not know what money is, and slavery still exists amongst them.

East of the Daflas are the Abor tribes, once the most ruthless savages on the entire northern border, whose present peacefulness may be only skin deep.

At the apex of the Assam salient are the Mikmhi tribes, notorious raiders in the last century.

Along the lower side of the salient are the warrior Naga tribes, confirmed head-hunters, who long resisted British attempts at any control.

Nagas gave a British garrison at Kohima a bad time more than sixty years before the Japs besieged this mountain town.

They are among the oldest of India's north-eastern peoples, they have chiefs who are sacred—probably the only surviving sacred chiefs in the world.

To Nagas in the mountain fastnesses along the Indo-Burma border the flat plains of Assam are a mere traveller's tale.

"Savages" as the "civilised" are prone to consider these tribespeople, they can give Indians a lesson or two in democracy.

They do not believe in the counting of heads, but in persons. Even a twenty-to-ten majority does not enforce a decision till nearly all have been won over to it. Only then, if two or three still hold out, are they coerced.

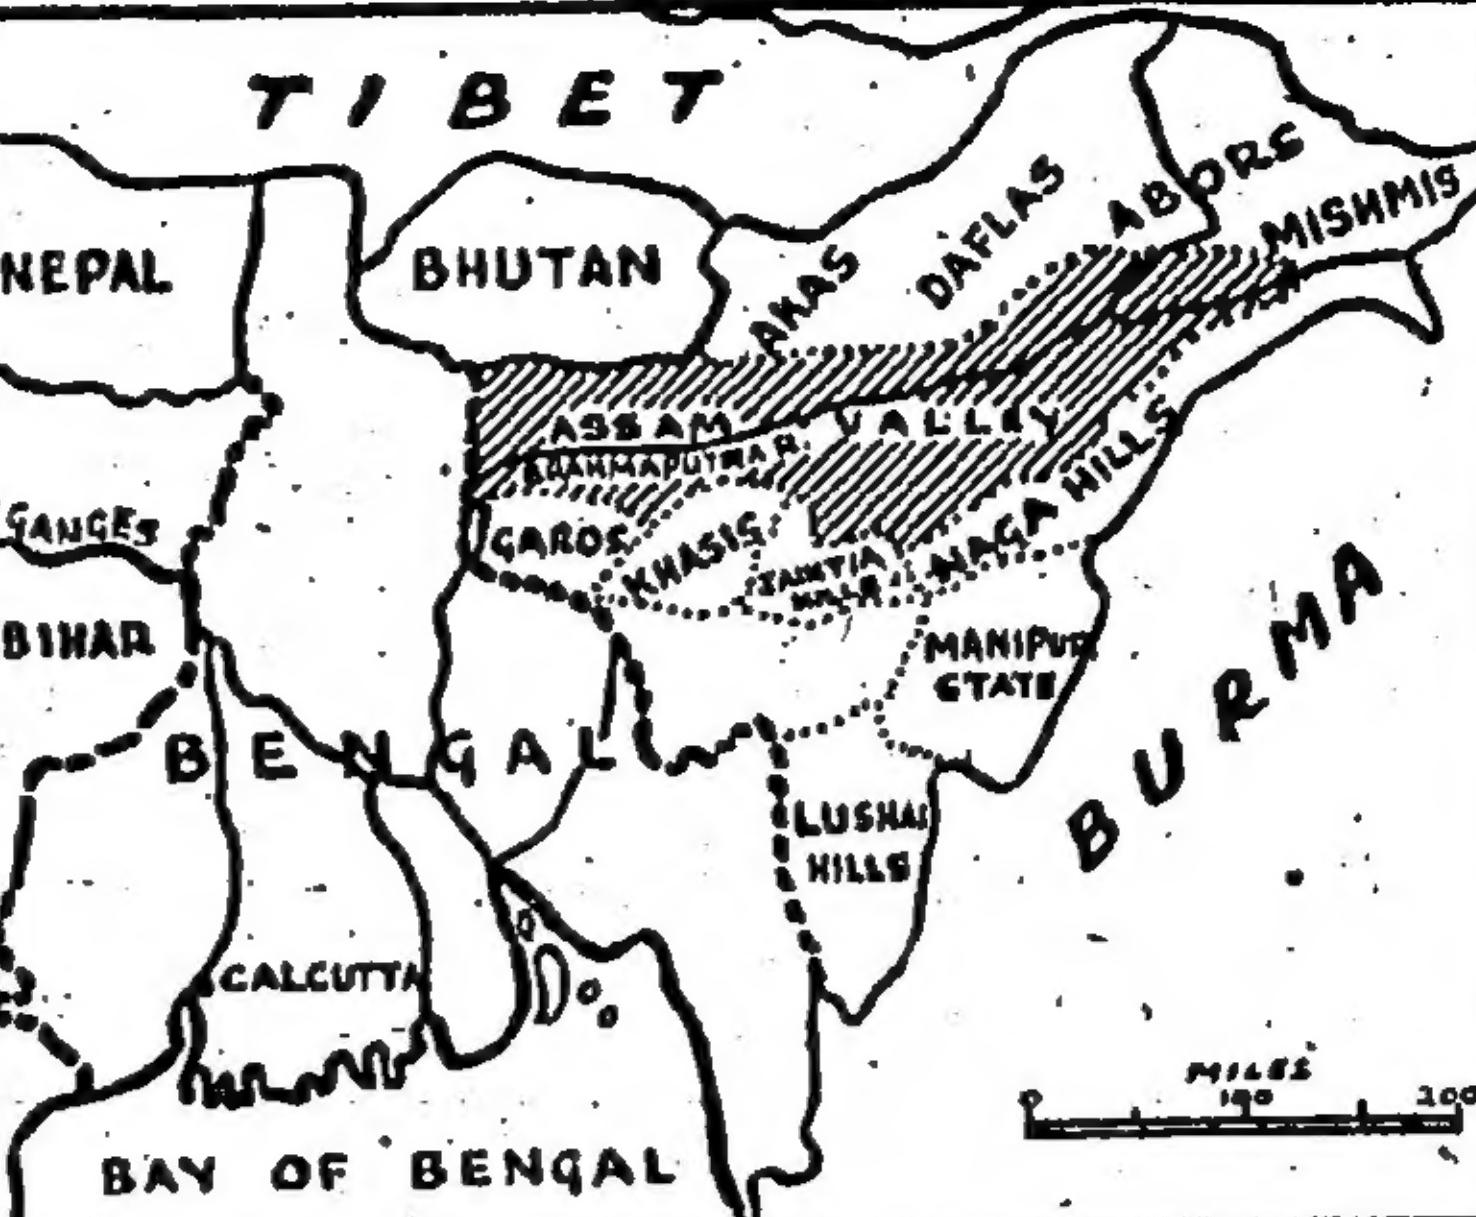

The land tenure system of these tribes has none of the iniquities which India knows—no landlords and no landless labourers; petty theft is almost unknown amongst them—Nagaland is a country without locks and keys and truthfulness is so general that it does not rank as a virtue.

And here is another lesson for India: A British administrator once walked into a Naga village deep in the interior and asked what the curious-looking "crash helmets" and large wooden swords were for.

Vacuum

"Oh, those are for village riots," he was told. "There is no point in killing each other on such occasions, so we don't do these and, when we've had enough of 'fighting' in the streets, everybody goes home satisfied."

Benign as may be a tribesman's attitude towards a fellow villager (war between different villages is frequent and bloody outside the orbit of British control), towards India these tribesmen may be forced to act otherwise.

Historians say that there has always been a pressure of peoples inwards from the mountains towards the Assam valley.

This pressure has been held in check by the British, but if a vacuum is created it will be filled from the hills.

Should the drift of peoples from the north-east towards India begin again, the peoples of Assam will have to be united to resist it. But they are not united today.

The main split is that between Hindu and Muslim. But there are disruptive tendencies among the 3,000,000 tribal peoples living inside Assam's borders.

In the hills there are the Khasis, who inhabit the country round about beautiful Shillong; the Syntungs of the Jaintia Hills, whose chiefdom was dispossessed by the British because he persisted with human sacrifice; the once warlike Lushais, who carved themselves a home in the hills where Wingate met his end; and the Garos.

Scattered over the Assam valley plains also are descendants of the Kacharis and Koches, both of whom gave Assam a line of kings, the Lalongs, and, last but not least, the Ahoms, once proud rulers of almost all Assam, and the only people to resist the conquering Muslim hordes in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

So far, these plains tribes have been content to be included in the Hindu fold, but now, aware of their differences from Indians in race, language and

Why Can't We Win At Wimbledon?

By Laurie Pignon

Day by day, lawn tennis stars from twenty countries are arriving in England in the hope of winning the Wimbledon Championships, which begin at the end of next month.

Even the most optimistic of the 10,000 daily visitors to the All-England club, with glasses tinted in the nicest shade of rose-pink, doesn't expect a home player to reach the semi-finals.

In the other amphitheatre of international sport Britain can more than hold her own, but in tennis we have not produced a champion since the days of Fred Perry and Dorothy Round, some ten years ago, and we don't seem to have a world beater in the making.

Queues Wait To Play

There are 2,800 clubs affiliated to the governing body—the Lawn Tennis Association—and some 15,000 non-affiliated clubs, and with an average of five courts each (leaving uncounted the thousands in parks), there are some 86,000 courts in Britain. Nobody can estimate the number of players, but I do know that each fine week-end in the summer there are queues waiting to play.

So why, indeed, from all these thousands can we not produce at least one star to reach the last eight at Wimbledon?

The war can be blamed, but not entirely. Tony Mottram will be cited as an example. At 18 he played his first international, and after no tennis for six years he made a come-back as Britain's No. 1. Would he have been a world beater?

"We have lost a generation," say the tennis chiefs—but isn't that true with all sports?

It is true that there was no major tournament play in Britain during the war, while America and some other nations carried on.

But the rot set in well before Hitler dropped his 1,000-pound bomb in the Centre Court at Wimbledon. Dorothy Round won the last Wimbledon title seriously.

In America nobody is missed. There are nearly 1,000,000 parka players in California, all registered with the local association, and such unforgettable players as Tilden, Helen Jacobs and Alice Marble played their first tennis on the "Golden Gates" recreation ground.

Britain needs a tennis talent scout.

There is only one tournament—and that sponsored by a newspaper—for parks and club players, and in its short history it has discovered Fred Perry, Pat Hughes, Derrick Barton, Roland Carter and Betty Pastingham—all international players.

The L.T.A. have this year organised a Parks tournament, but why can't the L.T.A. do this all over Britain? A week's tournament is a luxury few players can afford, for no expenses are allowed.

It is only outstanding players we are lacking, for there is nothing wrong with the game in Britain. In spite of the fact that equipment is double its pre-war price, and hundreds of courts are war casualties, as many people are playing tennis as ever.

Sports firms are inundated with orders, and hard court makers have enough to keep them busy for ten years.

Search The Parks For Stars

The answer is that we cannot expect first-class players from a second-class organisation. It is the L.T.A.'s job not only to raise the general standard of play, which they are doing, but to find champions. Who knows there may be another Perry waiting to be discovered in one of England's fair villages.

Give the parka player a chance of showing talent, coach him, if he does promote inter-club play, build indoor courts in every town for winter play, make tennis a democratic sport and champions will make themselves.

Thanks friend,

I can get it.

It's a fine drink,
this hot weather.

INCONSISTENT

To expect consistency in word and deed of the individual makes small allowance for human nature, so that to expect it of the Hong Kong Government would, undoubtedly, be asking too much. Even so, conceding the point, there would seem to be no special reason why there should not be an average commonsense approach to various problems as they arise. One of the most interesting and sensible of Government's recent decisions regarding the housing of subordinate officers takes into account the fact that before the war the majority of Government servants found their quarters outside those officially provided. With that in mind, "as a strictly temporary measure to alleviate the shortage of accommodation," the Government has now agreed to consider leasing suitable quarters which have been obtained by Government servants, to treat them as Government quarters, subject to General Orders, and to pay the difference between the actual rental of the house, or flat and the amount normally deductible from the particular officer's salary when he is provided with Government quarters. The difference, in some cases could very easily be as much as $300 to $400 monthly. For all practical purposes, except that he is suitably housed, the officer is treated exactly as though he were compelled, as so many are, to live in an hotel. With a decision such as this, there can be no possible quarrel. It is however, peculiar, to say the least, that the same Government servant, living in premises secured by private arrangement, but an arrangement which does not extend to willingness on the part of the landlord to grant a lease, can obtain no better allowance from Government than the 1941 rent allowance. The lease is the magic. With a lease, Government will pay up to $600 a month. Without this marvellous talisman, Government will not go beyond, say, $110 monthly. If the individual concerned finds himself unable to meet the difference, Government will willingly house him in one room in an hotel, with his wife and two children, and willingly pay up to $720 monthly for his accommodation. But to meet a bill of $250 monthly for three pleasant rooms outside is beyond the wit of the Accountant-General or the system to arrange. Comment surely is unnecessary.

The opponent of this view, of course, is Russia, while its keenest advocates are the British Dominions—Australia, Canada and New Zealand—which have shores on the Pacific, and so are particularly concerned to get effective guarantees against the recurrence of war there. How far Russia's resistance to the wishes of the smaller nations rests on a conviction, and how far it has been developed as a bargaining-point on the principle that the more "Noes" Russia emits, the more and greater the ransoms that she parties, however, seldom furnish a pretty spectacle. The hawker who merely has his stock-in-trade confiscated is lucky; he may be able to persuade the magistrate to be lenient and restore them to him. The old woman in from the New Territories with a basket of eggs, scarcely aware of what is going on when the E.U. squad appears, is to be pitied when her first intimation is the scattering and shattering of her eggs over the pavement. The Colony's laws and regulations are there to be observed, but it seems to have been forgotten that the hawker problem was given earnest study by a representative committee and that certain recommendations were made for ameliorating the situation. Among the principal of the proposals made was the provision of spaces in streets and open lots, where the hawker might ply his wares without fear of molestation. Until such time as the Government, or the Urban Council, has taken steps substantially implementing the Hawker Committee's recommendations, it seems only reasonable that the police should go about their thankless task with a little less ruthlessness.

can exact for converting them into "Yeses"—the course of 1947 should show.

Meanwhile the urgency of the Treaty grows. Not only are there certain situations of special danger, such as the state of tension between Russia and the United States in Korea, but the absence of any settlement with Japan undoubtedly increases the acute sense of instability from which nearly all Asia is suffering. Of course in countries like India, Burma, Indonesia and Indo-China the primary cause of unrest is the process of adjustment which is being worked out between their peoples and the European nations, whether Britain, Holland or France, under whose flag they were living in 1939. Much of the largest of these adjustments in scale is that with India, affecting as it does over 400 million people; and, if the transfer is carried through without causing chaos or civil war, an example of stability will have been set for the continent. If the opposite result occurred, and if at the same time the civil war in China continued, the lack of a commanding internal authority in either of these great populations would tend internationally to create a "vacuum," likely in occasions for quarrel between the interested outside nations.

Yet another reason was that this time the ground had been properly prepared. The authors of the anti-Bevin pamphlet, "Keep Left", did not have it all to themselves. The pro-Bevin pamphlet, "Cards on the Table," had taken away their monopoly of the printed word and had stated on behalf of the Foreign Secretary the facts indispensable for understanding his policy, which, as was explained here last week, a Foreign Secretary cannot ordinarily state for himself. For a good many well-meaning Socialists it is probably no exaggeration to say that this pamphlet opened their eyes. Mr. Bevin, in the passages of his speech addressed to his parliamentary detractors, was able to confine himself to doting on an "I" here and crossing a "T" there; and that is often about as much as Foreign Secretaries can safely do.

A World Review

He did not, however, confine himself to refuting detractors, but, speaking with the quiet assurance that comes from conscious grasp of a subject, he passed almost the whole field of foreign politics under review. He started from the Far East, where he rightly insisted that the dangers to world peace are at least as great as they are in Europe. He reaffirmed his support for the view that peace with Japan should not be dictated by four or five Powers only, but that all the eleven countries which fought Japan should be represented at the Peace Conference.

The opponent of this view, of course, is Russia, while its keenest advocates are the British Dominions—Australia, Canada and New Zealand—which have shores on the Pacific, and so are particularly concerned to get effective guarantees against the recurrence of war there. How far Russia's resistance to the wishes of the smaller nations rests on a conviction, and how far it has been developed as a bargaining-point on the principle that the more "Noes" Russia emits, the more and greater the ransoms that she

Chances And Risks

The intention is to delegate to these German bodies every full power of action. A final control will remain with the British and American military government and be exercised at the different levels by a joint Anglo-American board; but this, it is hoped, will be a safeguard, not often resorted to. The difficulties likely to be encountered are those encountered already. One is the weakness of the German personnel left available after war and demobilisation. Another is the dependence of policy upon decisions made at higher levels. Such will be the decision as to how much steel Germany will be allowed to make, or, again, the creation of a new German currency. The latter, which is probably the most urgent need of all for Germany's economy, is clearly beyond the new body's powers to plan; though it might prove invaluable for carrying a plan into effect.

In the past, British administration in Germany has often been gravely hampered by decisions taken at higher, i.e., diplomatic, levels, with which it had no control. The recent transfer of the administration to the Foreign Office should help to lessen this by making the administration responsible.

As for him, he has stood up to his party's assize, and emerged triumphant. For the present his personal position is stronger than ever; and in Germany he has, I believe, concentrated on their openings for an indefeasible success. The choice of Lord Pakenham as his principal lieutenant was a good one.

MEN, WOMEN AND MEMORIES

By ATTICUS

M. Aghnides belongs to that type of intellectual Greek who is above party and who has spent most of his life outside his own country. As is now well known, the British broadcasts to the occupied countries did a wonderful job in keeping alive the spark of hope in ultimate victory.

The Germans were fully conscious of the dangers of these broadcasts. They had also great faith in the efficiency of their own propaganda, and therefore, confiscated all short-wave sets in Czechoslovakia, but left the medium-wave sets in order that the Czechs might hear the fulminations of the efficient Dr. Goebbels.

The Czechs, who are an industrious and inventive people, soon found a remedy to these restrictions. Some wireless geniuses, experimenting with a coil of wire, produced a simple "adapter" which enabled listeners to hear the short-wave on their medium-wave sets. The "adapter," which of course was never put on the market, was so simple that even a peasant could make it. It created one of the biggest radio audiences in the occupied countries and was put to excellent use by Mr. Jan Masaryk, whose book "London Calling"—a collection of his broadcasts to Czechoslovakia during the war—has beaten all Czech records as a best seller.

The "adapter" christened during the war by the resistance groups, is known today to every Czechoslovak as the "Churchillka."

Not Forgotten

My friend tells me that there is no "iron curtain" in Czechoslovakia. Nowhere in Europe—and certainly not in England—do the bookshops contain such a profusion of anti-Communist and, admittedly, pro-Communist literature as in Prague.

Among the countries which he has visited since the war is Malaya. Although he does not believe that it will ever revert to its pre-war conditions, he is inclined, in spite of our initial mistakes, to be optimistic about its future, holding that the mixed population of the country needs and will benefit from an enlightened British administration.

I hear, by the way, from a friend who has just returned from Malaya after 40 years in that country, that the Malays have a new word for "bowling a fast one." It is "Jangar Macmichaelan"—in other words, "don't do a Macmichael," it is an old saying on Sir Harold Macmichael, who was sent to Malaya to carry out a tacless Colonial Office policy.

A Greek Farewell.

To the great regret of everyone who knows him, M. Aghnides, the Greek Ambassador, is leaving London. His successor will be M. Melas, the present permanent head of the Greek Foreign Office.

Mr. Spender, who talks well and modestly, believes in a form of Empire bloc in foreign policy and thinks that, together, the Commonwealth can provide a useful buffer between Russo-American antagonisms. Many will agree with him.

Among the countries which he has visited since the war is Malaya. Although he does not believe that it will ever revert to its pre-war conditions, he is inclined, in spite of our initial mistakes, to be optimistic about its future, holding that the mixed population of the country needs and will benefit from an enlightened British administration.

Immediately following Saragat's speech, the convention wildly cheered President Truman's veto of the Labour bill—United Press.

Cleveland, June 20. Giuseppe Saragat, head of the Italian Socialist Workers Party, addressed the International Ladies Garment Workers Union convention here today and warned that Europe was apprehensive over the "threatening shadow of dictatorship" arising from misery and starvation.

Saragat said that after 20 years of Fascism and war, Europe had not yet found the equilibrium which was an essential requirement for building a stable democracy. He said almost all Europe, but especially Italy, was engaged in a "death struggle" against the terrible menace of starvation.

"Misery and starvation are a danger on account of their political, social and moral consequences. Where misery and starvation are gaining, democracy in most cases is compelled to retreat and eventually to surrender."

Immediately following Saragat's speech, the convention wildly cheered President Truman's veto of the Labour bill—United Press.

PRESS AND WORLD PEACE

Grave Responsibility Of Information

Heritage Of The People

London, June 20. The importance of a free press as an indispensable factor for the achievement of world peace was stressed by Mr. R. A. Henderson, first Australian Director of Reuters, at a dinner given in his honour by Mr. Christopher Chancellor, General Manager of Reuters, tonight. Those present included the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Hugh Dalton; the Secretary of State for India, Lord Listowel; Lord Catto, Governor of the Bank of England; Lord Rothermere, Lord Layton and other directors of Reuters; Lord Bruce of Melbourne; Lord Beveridge; the High Commissioner for Australia, Mr. J. A. Beasley; Sir Lloyd Dumas, of Adelaide; and Sir Cecil Leys, of Auckland.

Mr. Henderson, who is Chairman of the Australian Associated Press, said that the Australian partnership with Reuters, the inauguration of which they were celebrating, was the beginning of a conception which brought newspapers in the Commonwealth together in a body, dedicated to the gathering and distribution of the world's news throughout the world.

The press he stressed, had a grave responsibility in seeing that the world's peoples were well and truly informed and were given the news fully, fairly, and objectively. It would be calamitous in this age of fear, unrest and uncertainty if those whose responsibility it was to enlighten and to inform were prevented from doing so either by their own inadequacies or prejudices or by restraints exercised by Governments or by the lack of free and efficient facilities.

Basic Liberty

A free press dedicated to publishing the world's news was the only means of achieving peace and understanding in the world by giving the fullest, freest opportunity to know conditions and to learn the views, desires and intentions of neighbours.

Remarking that much had lately been said about the necessity for the imposition of some form of control of newspapers, Mr. Henderson continued: "Freedom of the press is not a commodity which can be traded or controlled; it is a basic liberty and one of the heritages of the people. Newspapers are partly the creation and wholly the reflection of their readers, and so long as a person is free to choose what newspaper he shall read, then the danger of the abuse that comes from licence is remote."

Mr. Henderson said that the Reuter Trust, which guaranteed the trustworthiness, freedom and independence of that organisation, was the creation of Britain's newspapers, large and small. If a newspaper was to maintain the public confidence, it must be fair, accurate and honest.

Integrity

It was apparent how much more essential that should be in the case of great news agency which was the source of news for all newspapers. It was vital, especially in times like the present, that a news agency's integrity should be unquestioned and that it should be beyond the capacity of any individual or group to influence.

Reuters' integrity, character and its function as a factual news agency had been guaranteed in perpetuity, and apart from financial considerations, the Australian and New Zealand partnership with Reuters must entail a closer and a better understanding between the various parts of the Commonwealth.

Australia and New Zealand had accepted the most solemn obligations which Reuter standards involved and hoped to discharge them faithfully and well. Mr. Chancellor said that he thought that the new Reuter partnership was the first example of a United Kingdom organisation turning itself into a British Commonwealth organisation.

"We believe," he said, "we are setting a new pattern in Commonwealth relationships—this is a real partnership in the running of a British concern which operates on a world scale." —Reuter.

Russian Views

London, June 20. Pravda, the official Communist Party newspaper in Moscow, declared today in an article broadcast by Moscow radio that freedom of the press has become "one of the most important problems in international relations."

The article defended Russia's journalism as "honest and factual reporting" and assailed "capitalist" newspapers and press agencies who are waging a fierce struggle against a truly democratic press."

Pravda said several nations, swaying over to the Soviet view, point at the International Congress of Journalists at Prague.

Among these nations, it said, were Venezuela, Sweden, Norway, Finland, Iceland and several points France, Palestine and Holland.

"True to the end to the Anglo-American wing were only the delegations of Austria, Greece, the Philippines and

BEETLE WAS HIS PET

London, June 20. Britain's suspicious Customs men saw a slight bulge in the coat pocket of Albert Burwood when he returned from Belgium. Today Burwood was fined £10 for violating the Colorado Beetle order of 1933. A Customs officer testified that he killed Burwood's pet. —United Press.

Labour Party's Rebel Recants

London, June 20.

Mr. Richard Crossman, the Labour Member of Parliament who led the revolt of the Labour rank and file against the foreign policy of Mr. Ernest Bevin, the Foreign Secretary, last autumn, declared in a radio broadcast here tonight that the possibility of winning Russian confidence for British Socialists had faded away because of the "ruthless disregard the Russians have shown for British friendship."

Mr. Crossman, who has frequently warned the Government of the danger of drawing too close to the United States to the prejudice of relations with the Soviet Union, commented on yesterday's debate on foreign policy in Europe: "There is now a more general acceptance of the view that Mr. Bevin's method of handling the Russians is the only possible method."

He concluded: "Forces over which we have no control are dividing the world and I, at least, am convinced that Mr. Bevin is as determined as we are to prevent this if, and it is a very big if today, it is still possible." —Reuter.

When these questions were publicly asked by the Moderator of the Presbyterian Church, Rt. Rev. W. W. Ingram, Australian authorities conducted a survey of public libraries and booksellers to find the answers. These were surprising.

Here are the findings, in general terms:

Middle-aged readers provided the market for salacious books: Clergymen read Wild West fiction for relaxation.

Young people prefer scientific works of sex, instead of suggestive or "intimate" novels. They feel it is "smart" to read the scientific variety.

Men, in general, don't like "sexy" romances; prefer the slick detective stories of the Edgar Wallace-Peter Cheyney type.

Young people, while they don't want suggestive books, have a "Galaxy fixation," suggesting a Leftist thought tendency in this generation. Their preferences are for "adventure, travel, biography and serious studies of life and character," in that order.

The biggest single group of crime-horror-sex readers, according to the survey were "women of middle-age and above. The sort of women you see knitting." —Our Own Correspondent.

The storm arose when the Immigration Minister, Mr. Calwell, answered a statement by a member in the House of Representatives drawing attention to the acute shortage of marriageable young women in the Commonwealth. Mr. Calwell said the women would be brought out as migrants "to make possible the perpetuation of the Australian people." —Our Own Correspondent.

Truce Agreement On West Coast

San Francisco, June 20.

Two hundred ships tied up in West Coast ports for the past four days by the dispute between Maritime unions and industry were released as part of the "truce" agreement while new contract negotiations continued.

Operators and negotiators of the Marine Cooks and Stewards and American Communications Association agreed late on Thursday to end the tieup.

The first ship to sail since the tieup, branded as a "sitdown strike" by employers and a "lockout" by unions, was the Grace liner Santa Adela, which left for South American ports.

The Federal conciliator, Nathan P. Folmanger, said the West Coast contract terms would not necessarily "follow those on the East Coast."

Other sources said, however, that West Coast unions probably would hold out for a five-percent increase and nine paid holidays a year as also granted in the East Coast.

The agreement was hailed by Harry Bridges, chairman of the CIO Maritime Committee and President of the CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, as proof that disputes could be resolved without recourse to drastic legislation such as the Taft-Hartley labour bill.—United Press.

British Film Deal With Continent

Paris, June 21.

A big film deal involving about $2,000,000 is on the point of being signed between the British film magnate, Mr. J. Arthur Rank and important firms controlling some of the biggest film interests on the Continent.

The deal may mean the opening of a film studio between the powerful Rank organisation and American competitors seeking to capture the market. Sir Alexander Korda is also planning large-scale operations in France.

Under the new deal the Rank organisation will break loose from the Gaumont Company at present handling the distribution of Mr. Rank's films in France, and will set up as an independent business. Besides making

Beauty In The Hot Weather

By CLAUDIA

Does this kind of weather make you hate your hair? Do you feel that it is always letting you down? Do you rearrange it time and again without being satisfied?

Almost everyone I meet has a grudge against their one-time crowning glory. It is dry and brittle, it is limp and lank, it is greasy and dull, it is quite impossible!

We have a shampoo and set, and for five minutes it looks just as it should, always look. Tomorrow the mist will get into it, or the sun will bake it, or maybe we shall bathe and the seawater will seep under our caps, leaving it dull and sticky around the edges. (when we are sure to have a special date) it will look like nothing on earth! So what are we to do?

There are two ways of improving the situation; one is a short-term method which will freshen up your hair for that special date; the other is the long-term policy of improving the general tone and texture.

The "first-aid" treatment will only take a few minutes and the time spent will be more than justified. Start with a two minute toning friction for the scalp; put a little friction lotion into a saucer, dip in the finger-tips of both hands and rub briskly into the scalp. The harder you rub the better, working always from the edges towards the crown. Now sprinkle a little toilet cologne onto your hair-brush and brush well, using long, smooth strokes from the roots of the hair down to the ends. The cologne will loosen any particles of dust, damp or sand; while the long brush-strokes will draw them down, and out of the hair.

Before the cologne has time to evaporate, press the waves and curls into position. Finally, rub a trace of brilliantine between your palms and then press them lightly against the hair. A run through with your comb to loosen out the waves and curls and I am sure that you will survey the result with satisfaction.

To improve the general tone and condition of your hair is to stimulate the cells of the scalp from which the hair grows, and the ducts supplying the natural oil which no amount of brilliantine can ever replace. Healthy scalp means healthy hair.

If your hair is dry and brittle, nourish the scalp by rubbing in a little olive oil the night before you have a shampoo. If you suffer from dandruff, clear it away by using one of the new and most effective dandruff shampoos; then your scalp will be able to breath. If your hair is inclined to greasiness, treat it to a course of scalp massage and friction, for the glands need bracing and stimulating. An occasional electric vibro massage is also an excellent help.

Nearly everyone knows that brushing is good for the hair, but very few know just how good it is, and why. Not only does brushing remove dust and dirt, which settles from the air in invisible particles. More important still, it draws the natural oil of the scalp down the length of the hair, and that oil is a finer conditioner than any cream or treatment. For the hair itself, nothing is as beneficial as brushing. Nothing else can impart that lovely, natural gloss and sheen. Moreover, brushing does not, as so many women fear, pull out the waves and curls. On the contrary, they will comb back into place with more spring and resilience after a good brushing.

Our grandmothers knew a thing or two about hair! Their Victorian coiffures were noted for their sleek gloss and brilliance. One of their favourite tricks is well worth remembering. Give the smooth parts of your coiffure a final polish with a piece of soft silk... an old silk handkerchief is said to give your hair a very fine finish!

To these things must be added the directions of approach and very real interest of the

Try this INDIAN STYLE

...an evening dress that you can make

By EDNA MCKENNA

The evening dress illustrated here is an up-to-date adaptation of an ancient Indian style traditional costume worn by Jean Simmons in "Black Narcissus." This is a perfect idea for a summer evening dress, simple and classically smart. The instructions, with an easy-to-follow diagram, are not complicated to make up.

You should use a 35-inch wide material of plain colour, rather than print to obtain the best effect, and a stock-size figure should require only two and a half yards. This for an evening dress in a cotton-ridged age is something of a minor miracle. Naturally, if you at the top of front panel cut to a piece of elastic allowing sufficient stretch to get the dress on and off. Fasten the ties at the top of the front panel.

Proceed then to join shoulder and side seams of front and back pieces.

Sew a narrow facing round the neck and down the front panel. Turn the facing round the little cap shoulder.

Join bodice to skirt at waist, leaving the bodice free to knot as desired.

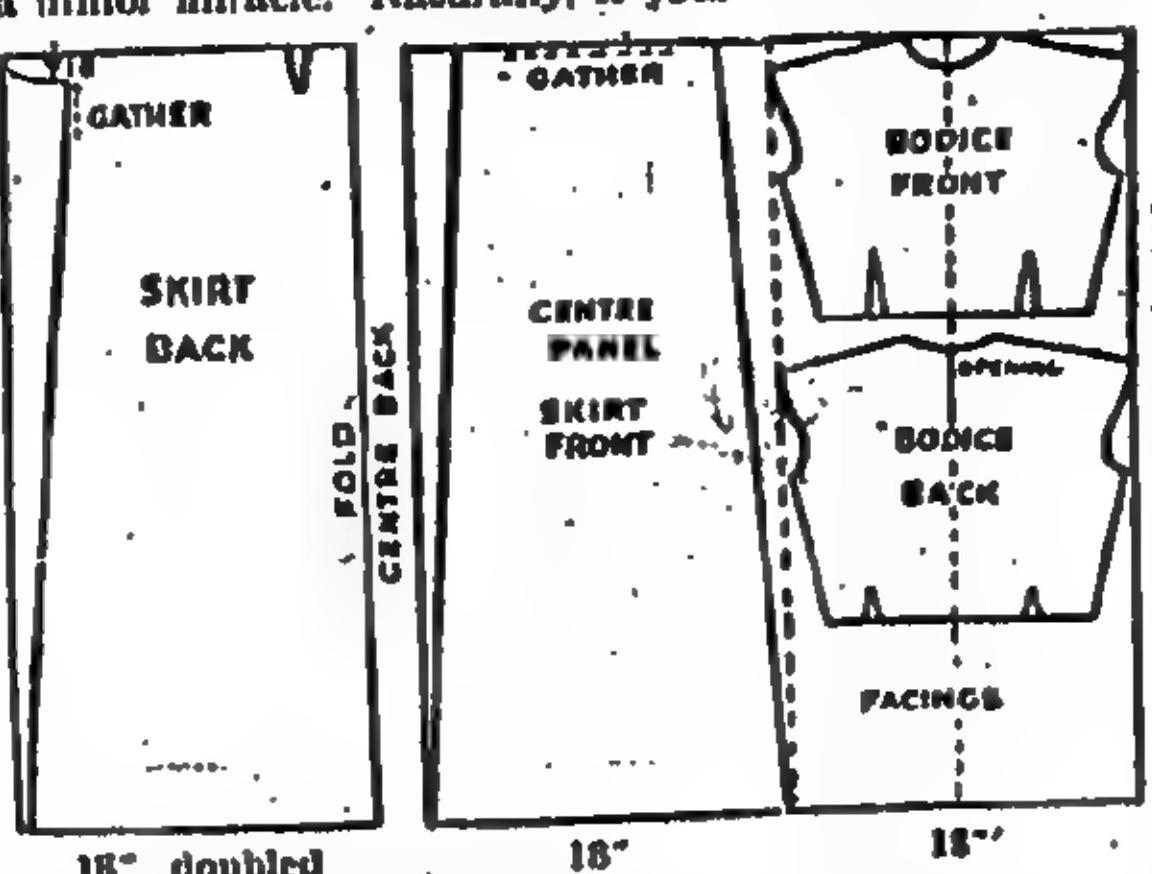

To create the Indian look, decorate the bodice with embroidery in gold thread and sequins.

Put up hem and tidy up generally.

Proceed to embroidery on reverse side very carefully over a damp cloth. Then sew hooks and eyes up front fastening.

WHEN HOLLYWOOD SLIPPED UP

Hollywood, June 21. A movie company, shooting scenes at night for the film "Singapore" near a small lake, had to remake the scenes because the croaking of frogs was recorded on the sound track.

At first this was considered good local colour, but a research assistant later announced that the frogs actually ruined the scenes because he said, Singapore has no frogs.—Associated Press.

Union would, after its first disappointment, have understood the necessity of this preoccupation with the difficulties of England, it would have been impossible similarly to persuade the Afrikaans-speaking section. To convince people who live in all but perpetual sun that winter alone could make it necessary for the King of South Africa to abandon his first tour of the Dominion of South Africa would have been impossible. The gesture made by the King in carrying out the tour despite personal preoccupations with Britain will not be forgotten by the people of the Union.

King in everything he saw and heard, and the charm of the Queen, the warmth that stood always behind her Majesty's smile was again factor immeasurably important in the "conquest" of South Africa. The Queen has a magnetism that produces remarkable effects with crowds. We, travelling at the rear of innumerable processions, used to hear two things endlessly reiterated—"Isn't she lovely?" and "The Queen smiled straight at me!" For her tour was a triumph of personality, unmarred and faultless.

The Princesses share the attributes of both their father and their mother. Their capacity for self-effacement when the King and Queen occupy the centre of the stage, their self-assurance when by themselves, the humanity of Princess Elizabeth as shown with the lepers at Maseru, would be themselves to charm South Africa. But more than any of these separate and individual things it was the unity of the family; the deep reality of all the best that the word "family" conveys up to the English mind, that made what might have been a formal occasion into a triumph.

What will this success mean?

This tour was not political except inasmuch as the cohesion and maintenance of the British Empire is political. It is known that His Majesty was deeply disturbed during the latter portion of Vanguard's passage to the Cape. The lamentable weather, the shortages and restrictions which were visited upon an unhappy England made it intensely desirable that he should be with his own people in Britain as had been with them through all the troubles of war. But the King also of the British Dominions beyond the seas.

The Royal Family conquered South Africa by three things: by lack of pomp, by evident sincerity, by the essential quality of their existence as a family. The importance of the family in the national life of South Africa is perhaps greater than it is in England today, and the deeply personal relationships between the King and Queen so often evident even in the publicity of a visit, the strong ties between this father and mother and their daughters, made an overwhelming impression on the people of the Union.

For some days the continuance of the tour was in the balance. The King considered the possibility of remaining in Capetown long enough to open the Union Parliament, and then leaving the Queen and the Princesses to carry out the programme of the tour, return himself by air to Britain.

The issues involved were complex. Though possibly the English-speaking section of the

SUMMERY NEWS to cheer your wardrobe

Drawings
By BERILL

By EDNA
McKENNA

SUMMER is really coming in, and with it are to be seen around town my number of clever ideas to brighten up your wardrobe.

Prettiest was the hat worn by a girl taking a lunch-time stroll in Regent's Park. It was a simple black straw with a wide brim, the back of the head with a rainbow-coloured cotton scarf caught round the crown and draped across the chin to tie in a big bow under the chin. The effect was demure and bewitching.

Coolest was the blouse seen in a K.N.T. outfit, made from a large square floral handkerchief in lawn. The handkerchief was folded trianglewise, the round neck cut out at the centre of the fold, and off-bound. The sides were hemmed from the under-arm to the waist and gave the distinctive cap sleeves.

Narrow ribbon of the waist tied in a neat bow at the back. An hour or two, two coupons and a little money and the blouse is yours!

A MUSING, practical and easy to copy was the idea seen at a dress show. Take military-looking cotton twill fabric, two coupons at each side of the waist on the belt of a pink suit. Keep money in one box, makeup in the other and all necessity for carrying a bag on a hot day is done away with.

At the theatre was a girl who struck a truly glamorous note. Her hair was caught in a loose hair-net which was seen all over with brightly coloured sequins. It was a tip guaranteed to lend charm to the plainest of plain Janes, and now that sequins can be bought in the shop at 5s. 3d. a yard should be simple to copy.

American ideas are fun. Try sewing white daisies on plaid ribbon streamers to dangle from your hat, or for a new style costume tie the ribbons to your hat streamers and leave them to rest on your shoulder.

Fashion yourself a pair of barefoot sandals bound with coloured leather here. For evening, sew sequins on black velvet ribbon for a hair band, or spance them over your gloves for a truly special occasion. Try sequins with white gloves, sew them on with red thread, thickly at the top, thinning out to one or two at the wrist.

THE showrooms at a new children's shop in Oxford Street had an array of wares prepared for a junior Ascot when I called in there on the opening day. There was the largest display of organdie frocks that have been since pre-war days. In the most popular colours, with real hand-smocking on the yokes, full skirts and big butterfly bows tying at the back. To wear with these were floppy organdie bonnets.

Designed for girls of from two to ten years, they are all in the neighbourhood of £2.

For small boys I liked the suits for special occasions, with white linen tops smocked in bright colours, and coloured trousers, round about £3. 10s. The white linen trousers with bib tops, coloured blouses (£2 6s. 2d.), which looked as if they could stand up to any amount of wear.

There are also supplies of leather sandals in brown, white and other colours, and with rubber or chrome leather soles. Best of all was the news that in all departments stocks were good, from christening right up to gay checked romper and linen frocks for girls of 16.

THERE was a non-utilitarian show at a recent utility dress show, where there were all the latest fashions for housewives, and afternoon frocks and suits for sale in the shop in late August were to be seen.

The reason for this luxury air was that many of the fabrics in the models were designed for export, but have now been directed to the home trade.

The materials included soft toning stripes and grey marle, light-weight jersey fabrics in pastel shades, and tightly knitted moss crepes, all of which have been in demand and are supplied by many countries. Dresses varied from classic tailored styles to full skirts for teenage models and draped hip lines for cocktail frocks.

BRIDGE PLAFOND

By YARBOROUGH

The newly-formed European Bridge League recently invited some countries to join their league, but did not invite others because of the possible difficulties of fraternisation. In particular it was considered, in the case of former enemy countries, that too short an interval had elapsed since the war.

Some of these countries — Austria, Hungary, and Italy — have other views. They consider that as they have been invited to take part in the Olympic Games in London in 1948 they should be eligible to join a European Bridge League. It is a question of the difference in degree of fraternisation. In an indoor social game such as bridge, there is closer fraternisation than in an "Olympic" game. With the increasing number of Anglo-German marriages on the Continent views on degree of fraternisation may however require modification.

These three countries excluded from the E.B. League have been very active in their post-war bridge activities. Austria is ahead of the others with its own well-organised bridge league. Vienna is indeed a centre of very great interest to bridge players, because it has staged a revival of Bridge-Plafond by introducing some attractive, if speculative, modifications.

Mrs. Dixie Marcus, an outstanding player, who has recently returned from Vienna, says this game is austrating contract and is quite fascinating. The declarer gets 50 points for making his contract, and 50 more for each overtrick in our own current International Bridge-Plafond Laws (1932), but the Viennese have added other bonuses, some, such as Slam bonuses, borrowed from Contract Bridge, while others are scored on "goulash" hands. After the bidding of a hand is passed all round the hand is dealt again as a "goulash" hand and the whole of the resulting score or scores go, all above the line.

In our Portland Club, whose sporting anti-convention members play "goulashes" not only on hands thrown in, but also on those where at a low score only "one" has been bid, this new idea of scoring "goulash" hands above the line only should be considered with a view to a possible alteration of the special "goulash" rules they issued for general use.

Care Of The Hands

By VICTOR MAMAK

"The surest way to tell a woman's age is to look at her hands," said a famous writer once.

There is a great deal of truth in the above assertion. No matter how youthful a face a woman can manage to keep with the help of modern beauty aids even when she is in the wrong side of forty, if she has neglected to give the same care to her hands, she has miserably failed in her attempt to look young. "Run Down" hands will advertise her as plainly as a wrinkled face which has not known the care of modern beauty creams.

Beautiful, youth and expressive hands should not be confined to Hayworths, de Havillands, Dietrichs and Lamarrs only — they are just as much the birth-right of a housewife who cannot afford a 'help' to do the washing. If you think that daily hard housework must leave your hands all roughened up, red and scratchy dry, you are wrong.

It can be safely asserted that all Englishwomen in this Colony have two or more servants to do the family's washing, cooking and other housework — yet they are the ones who have the most "run-down" hands and I have a suspicion that they are faintly ashamed of them. Frankly speaking, an Englishwoman takes little or no care to "groom" her natural assets by means of scientific beauty aids. As far as make-up and "grooming" is concerned she is a "dead loss."

Little Attention

If your hands are rough, cracked or generally "run down," the following treatment will help a great deal.

Each night before retiring, wash your hands in warm water and pat them dry with soft towel. Massage a liberal portion of a rich night cream or a good hand cream well into your hands, forearms and elbows. Do not remove the cream but slip on a pair of inexpensive, loose cotton gloves and leave them on overnight. The cream will be absorbed by the skin and nourish the sebaceous glands which have perhaps been dried out due to too much outdoor exposure or water coming into contact with the hands too often.

Continue this treatment for a few weeks and you will be delighted with the results. For reddened hands use a bleaching lotion about three times a week until your hands have attained an even tone. From then onwards, use the bleaching lotion once a week only and in between do not forget to use your favourite hand cream or hand lotion. In fact every time your hands come into contact with water or after outdoor exposure, massage a bit of hand cream or a few drops of hand lotion into them. Make this a habit and soon you will be taking a sacred pride in that all important feminine softness of your hands.

Nail Shaping

Next come the finger nails which are equally important for well-groomed hands. Your nails must always be kept nicely shaped. They should never be pointed but shaped. Always use a file to shape them and on no account must a scissor be used to cut them or else your nails will grow thick and "taigged."

If your nails are brittle or if they are inclined to peel, chip and split, they must be properly treated. Here is an important tip which will put an end to all your nail troubles. Soak the nails in hot oil for a few minutes each night. Very simple but very effective.

Before you manicure your nails observe a simple rule of dipping your finger tips in hot, soapy water for a few minutes and then rinsing them in clear water and drying them thoroughly. Then take an orange stick and wrap around it a bit of cotton wool dipped in oil or lubricating cream and gently push back the cuticle with it.

When you come to the actual decoration of your nails, I must say that the choice of colours entirely rests with you. Try to avoid deeper and flashier tones in Nail Enamel. Scarlet-tipped fingers are praised by some while others stigmatise them as gaudy and vulgar. Match your dresses, your hats or your handbags... do whatever you think will look attractive. But if you are in doubt it would be safer to use a conservative natural shade. On no account must you copy others. Stick to your own individual taste.

Sydney, June 21. Offerings of food are being placed at the foot of Queen Victoria's statue in Victoria Square, Adelaide.

They are plain-wrapped, and leave no clue to the identity of the donors. They are being collected by the statue custodian nightly, and sent to the Food for Britain Fund.

A British official here said: "This demonstration of loyalty and affection for the Mother Country is the most moving thing I have ever seen."

The idea developed spontaneously among the "Little People" of Adelaide during Empire Day, and since then 1,500 parcels have been lovingly placed under the Queen's stone likeness.—Our Own Correspondent.

Geneva, June 21. The Hungarian ex-Premier Ferenc Nagy, who has just left Switzerland for America is trying to sell the car which was presented to him last year by Stalin.

The car is a big German Mercedes which the Russians took as booty in Germany. Mr. Nagy received it from the hands of the Russian General Sviridov, head of the Allied Control Commission in Hungary who is now alleged to have been instrumental in the Hungarian equip.

M. Nagy stated: "I am a poor man. I do not know what shall live on in the future."—Our Own Correspondent.

House Overrides Veto

Washington, June 20. In a broadcast to the nation tonight, President Truman denounced the Taft-Hartley labour bill which he had vetoed earlier today as bad for labour, bad for management and bad for the country.

President Truman acknowledged the need for legislation to correct abuses in the field of labour relations and said he had hoped that Congress had sent him a labour bill he could sign. But, he said, the Taft-Hartley Act was a shocking piece of legislation, unfair to the working people of this country.

Even as he spoke, chairman Robert Taft of the Senate Republican Policy Committee and co-author of the measure, was preparing to go on the air with an answer.

Mr. Truman said: "Under no circumstances could I have signed this bill."

His veto message to Congress made no political names, but he charged this in his speech tonight. He hurried back to chairman Fred Hartley of the House Labour Committee to state made by Hartley to the House on June 4 that "you are going to find there is more in this bill than may meet the eye."

Abusing Workers' Rights

The President in cold vein described this explanation as "revolting." He criticized the bill for abusing, as he saw it, the right of millions of workers to "join together and bargain with their employers for fair wages and fair working conditions."

The following are excepts from President Truman's speech: "At noon today, I sent Congress a message vetoing the Taft-Hartley labour bill. I vetoed the bill because I am convinced it is a bad bill. It is bad for labour, bad for management, bad for the country. I had hoped Congress would send me a labour bill I could sign. I said before, and I say now, we need legislation to correct abuses in the field of labour relations."

"Last January, I made specific recommendations to Congress as to the kind of labour legislation we should have immediately... I believe my proposals were accepted by the great majority of our people as fair and just. If Congress had accepted these recommendations, we would have today a basis for improved labour-management relation... but the Taft-Hartley bill is a shocking piece of legislation."—United Press.

The Veto

Washington, June 20. President Truman today vetoed the Republican-sponsored Anti-Labour Bill. The Bill, which won substantial approval in both Houses of Congress, provides for court injunction to prevent major strikes and puts major curbs on unions.

The following rates are quoted in the bill, which has been the main subject of legislation since the Republicans came to power in the House of Representatives and the Senate at the beginning of this year, as "unduly burdensome or actually unworkable."

Ordinary union newspapers would be prevented from commenting on national election issues. "I regard this as a dangerous intrusion on free speech, unwarranted by any demonstration of need and quite foreign to the stated purposes of the bill," the President said.

The provision which would refuse certification of unions if any Communists held office in them was unworkable. "Congress intended to assist labour organizations to rid themselves of Communist officers," President Truman continued.

"Will Be Law"

"With this objective, I am in full accord. But the effect won't be far different."

"The bill would deny the peaceful procedures of the National Labour Relations Act to unions unless all its officers declared under oath that they were not members of the Communist Party.

"A mere refusal by a single individual to sign the required affidavit would prevent the entire National Labour Union from being certified for the purposes of collective bargaining."

President Truman will broadcast late tonight on his decision to veto the bill.

Republican Fred Hartley, one of the bill's authors, told reporters: "The Bill is going to be law—veto or no veto."

Veto Overridden

The House of Representatives today decided by 331 against 93 votes to override President Truman's veto on the Anti-Labour Bill.

The action left the decision whether the Bill shall become law to the Senate, which is generally expected to muster the required two-thirds majority also to override the veto and to assure passage of the Bill.

The Senate vote is expected late today or early tomorrow.—Reuter.

LEFTISTS SEIZE BANKS

Budapest, June 20. Control of Hungary's three largest private banks went to the Leftist bloc today.

The government announced that twelve bank trustees would control the Hungarian Bank, the Commercial Bank and the Bank of the Danubian Basin. All twelve directors are Communists or members of Communist-aligned groups.—United Press.

Far From Solution

President Truman reiterated his conviction that legislation dealing with relations between management and labour was necessary, "but this bill is far from a solution of these problems."

"Taken as a whole, it would reverse the basic direction of our national labour policy, inject the Government into private economic affairs on an

ATLEE SPEAKS HIS MIND

Barsley, Yorkshire, June 21.

Prime Minister Attlee told a meeting of Yorkshire miners today that "in several countries of Eastern Europe human rights are denied and the so-called democratic Government is a travesty."

My Attlee directly attacked his Left Wing critics within the Labour Party who condone events in Eastern Europe but who "would protest vigorously if precisely the same things were done by governments of the Right."

The Premier, in his most outspoken criticism of events in Eastern Europe since he took office, declared:

"Freedom of speech, freedom of conscience and personal freedom" is the right of every individual whether he be capitalist or worker, Conservative, Liberal or Socialist.

"Whenever you find devices such as a single list of candidates, wherever you find a government that cannot be removed by the method of the ballot box, there is no democracy and no true freedom."—United Press.

Increased Tension In Athens

Athens, June 21. Reports of foreign troops mustering on the northern borders of Greece and in the larger cities of Greece's neighbouring countries in the last few days has brought increased tension in Athens.

The Royalist newspaper "Estia," usually extremely well-informed, reveals information claimed to be obtained from reliable sources regarding movements of "International Brigade" personnel towards the guerrilla front in Northern Greece.

It is claimed that the recruiting centre for the International Brigade is the Milan Military Club, which has been in Communist hands since the liberation of Italy. Over 2,000 men have been passed by this centre from Italy to Split, on the Yugoslav-Adriatic coast, during the last few weeks, says a well-informed Government official.

They say that if any Albanian, Yugoslavian, or Bulgarian is captured among the bandit forces in the North, he will be able to avoid inculpation by saying: "I am not fighting for the International Brigade recruited outside the Balkans."

The Greek Government's reaction to this state of affairs has been to authorize—with the consent of the United States Ambassador—a thirty per cent increase in the effective strength of the National Army. It is estimated 20,000 new men, will join the Army by mid-July, and a further 30,000, drawn from the 1944-46 classes, will be put in the front line as soon as they have received training.

The Government aims to liquidate the present bandit resistance, before foreign aid allows the situation to get out of hand.—Our Own Correspondent.

The Greek Government's reaction to this state of affairs has been to authorize—with the consent of the United States Ambassador—a thirty per cent increase in the effective strength of the National Army. It is estimated 20,000 new men, will join the Army by mid-July, and a further 30,000, drawn from the 1944-46 classes, will be put in the front line as soon as they have received training.

The Government aims to liquidate the present bandit resistance, before foreign aid allows the situation to get out of hand.—Our Own Correspondent.

Getting Down To Brass Tacks

Shanghai, June 21. The ECAFE has only three or four days left to get down to brass tacks.

With most of its allotted time used up on procedural debates, the Commission now has only one item on the agenda to attend to—the main item that brought it to Shanghai.

Some time on Monday, a sub-committee studying and "expounding" the British proposal for gathering limited data for the Economic Council will report to the Commission.

With no business on hand, the ECAFE has been filling time listening to speeches by representatives of UNRRA, FAO and WHO. This morning they ran out of speeches and adjourned 10 minutes after gathering.

Behind the scenes, the sub-committee continued the debates. It appears the Commission plans to get down to business next week. Several delegates already have booked plane passages out of Shanghai for next Saturday.—Associated Press.

The Act forbade any person to enter Burma without either a passport or an immigration certificate, other than exempted British subjects domiciled in Britain.

Commenting on the report that Burmese officials had denied that the act was a discriminatory measure aimed against Indians, the official said: "The Act is definitely discriminatory."—Reuter.

San Francisco, June 21. General Mark W. Clark, new Commander of the United States Sixth Army, says he feels there is no immediate danger of war—but that America should adopt a "firm and definite" policy to curb the spread of Communism.

As the four star general took over his new command at San Francisco's Presidio, he told newsmen that the "Russian soldiers certainly don't want war any more than we do and heaven knows we don't."

Twice during the interview the general departed from his military man's usual hands of policy regarding political questions and delivered sharp warnings against both foreign and domestic Communism. He expressed fear that Communism might succeed in Austria as it did in Hungary.

He declared, "the pattern is similar in Austria and elsewhere, that possession of all the property which the Austrians took from the Austrians gives them (the Russians) a tremendous economic hold on that country."

He advocated a firm United States policy "to let everybody know exactly what we have in mind" about the spread of Communism in Europe. He termed the Truman doctrine, which is designed to halt the spread of Communism, "a step in the right direction." With a staff of about 60, the new body will be assisted by three specialists appointed by the United Nations. —Central News.

HONG KONG, SUNDAY, JUNE 22, 1947.

DREARY WEATHER AT ASCOT MEETING

(From Vernon Morgan, Reuters Sports Editor)
Ascot, June 20.

Ascot's Royal four-day meeting concluded in dreary weather this afternoon with exchanges again favouring the bookmakers, and the big event of the afternoon, the Wokingham Stakes, a handicap over six furlongs, falling to the unconsidered outsider Lucky Jordan.

Lucky Jordan, a four-year-old, started at 33 to 1 on the board and at over 50 to one on the tote. It was a case of being beaten's luck, as the Yorkshire trainer, Alec Boyd, was having his first runner ever at this Royal meeting. This colt, bred in Ireland, was drawn on the extreme outside of the field, whence the Hunt Cup Winner, Master Vote, had also come.

Second to Lucky Jordan was another Yorkshire-trained horse, Van de Grace, starting at 20 to one, with the joint favourite, Irish Dance, third of 23 runners.

France gained two victories, making their total of successes during the meeting four, nothing like as many as had been anticipated.

Dramatic Finish

The longest race in Britain's flat racing calendar, the Queen Alexandra Stakes, went to last year's Cesarewitch winner, Monsieur l'Admiral, who was having his second outing of the meeting. This son of the Grand Prix winner, Admiral Drake, was very heavily backed by his English owners, Mr. Barnard Hankey, and his friends and he became a firm seven to one chance.

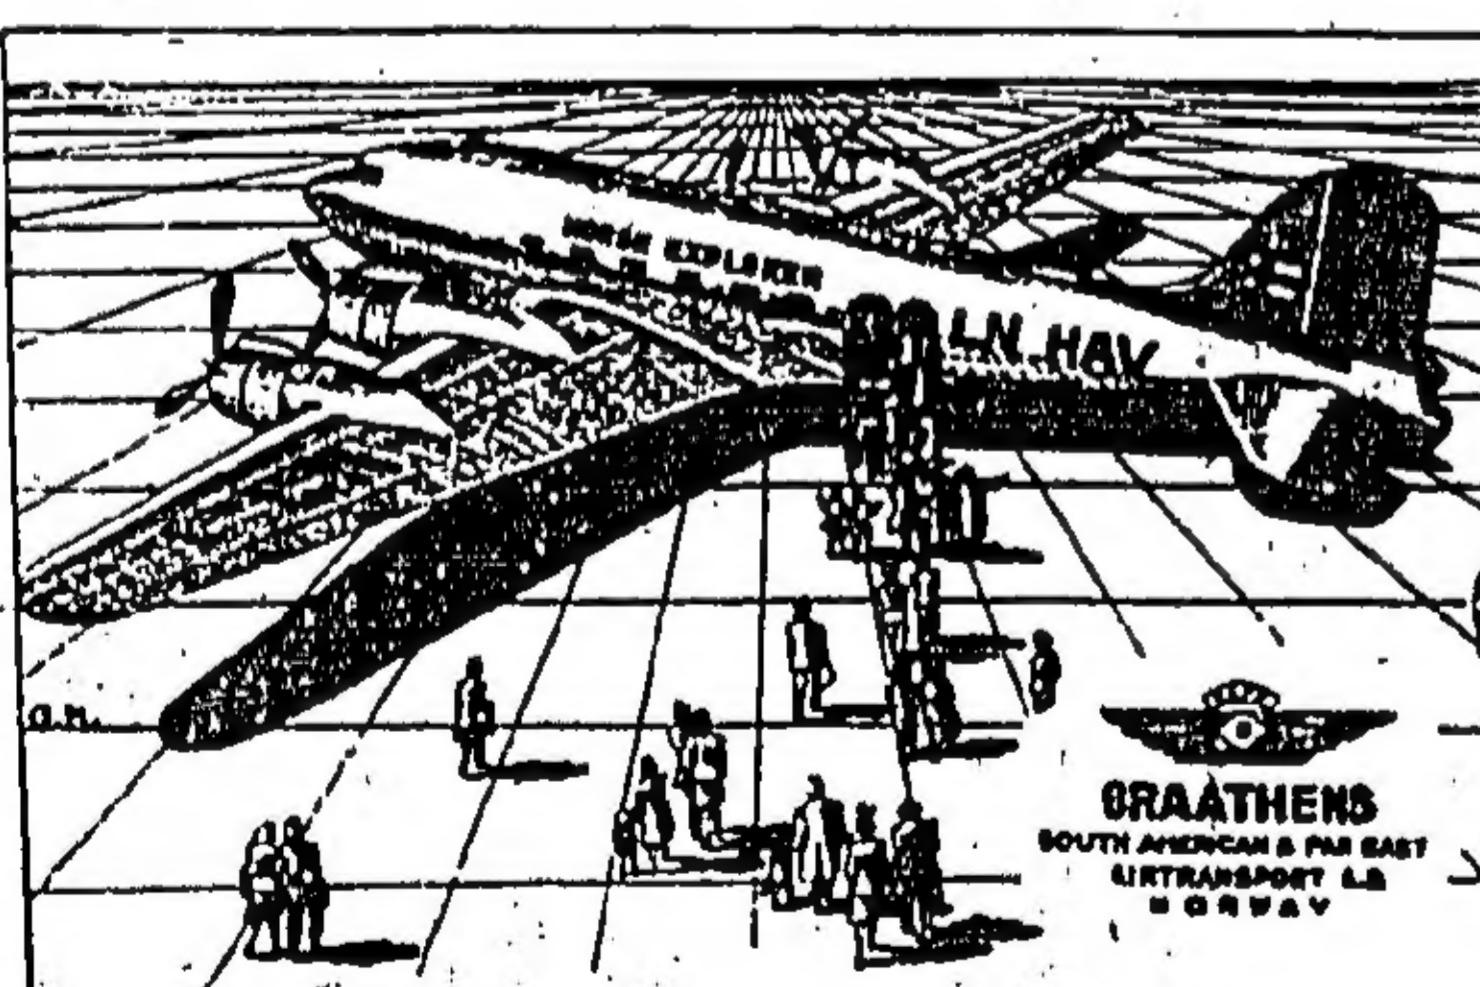

There was a dramatic finish between Monsieur l'Admiral and the eight to 11 favourite, Reynard Volant, which had won the Ascot Stakes on Tuesday. As they came into the straight back of Reynard Volant were on good terms with themselves but after rounding the bend, Charlie Smirke, riding the "Frenchman," made up more than a dozen lengths in the next furlong to get within striking distance of the leader. It was only in the last few yards that Smirke got Monsieur l'Admiral's nose in front to win this long-distance event by bare length.

Earlier, the French classic colt, Nigral, had carried Marcel Boussac's famous colours of orange with grey cap into the first place in the Hardwick Stakes, run over one and a half miles. This race was thought to be a good thing for the improving British three-year-old, Chancellor, who started at ten to 11, but he was no match for his elders and Nigral, which started at two to one, was followed home by two four-year-olds, the Aga Khan's Chico and

THE OLYMPICS

London, June 21. The Olympic Organising Committee announced that 15 more nations have accepted bids to the 1948 games in London, bringing the total acceptances so far to 27 and the committee said that entries for individual sports were "heavy."

The British team is expected to total 348 athletes competing in every Olympic event, the announcement said. — Associated Press.

JOE GETS A BIG HAND

London, June 20. Generalissimo Stalin, accompanied by M. Molotov and leaders of the Communist Party and of the Soviet Government, attended the opening session tonight of the Supreme Soviet of the Russian Federation in the large hall of the Kremlin, Moscow. Radio reported tonight.

Marshal Stalin was greeted with "loud and prolonged applause" when he mounted the rostrum of the Presidium, the Radio added. — Reuter.

British Golf Prizes 'Export Only'

London, June 20. Like most other major British golf prizes this season, "The Star" £1,500 Professional Golf Tournament, now being played at Wentworth (Surrey) must have been labelled "export only."

The 36-holes final tomorrow is between the Australian, Norrie Von Nida, and a Belgian, Flory Van Donck, and the prize will follow the Ryder Cup, the British Amateur Championship and the British Women's Championship overseas.

The two invaders deservedly won their way into the final from a large field of British golfers in this first professional match play event of the season which was expected to provide the Ryder Cup selectors with some pointers to form in choosing the team to play America's professionals in the United States towards the end of the year. — Reuter.

American Pro

Detroit, June 20. The defeats of Ben Hogan, title holder, and Bobby Locke, South African champion, who has been winning tournaments in the United States, provided early surprises in the first round of the match play stage in the American Professional Golfers Association championships here today.

Henry Ransom (Chicago) beat Locke by one hole, and Tony Penna, a Cincinnati professional, beat Hogan by three and one. Perhaps led all the way from the seventh hole and was seven under par figures for the seventeen holes played. Locke held a one-hole lead from the 10th to the 17th where Ransom levelled and then finished the match at the 18th when Locke's 12 foot putt slipped the cup and stayed up. — Reuter.

Salt Lake City, Utah, June 21.

One world record was officially equalled, one National Collegiate Athletic Association mark matched and the world's fastest time for the two-turn 440 track were turned in yesterday in the qualifying heats of the N.C.A.A. meet.

Mel Patton, of the University of Southern California, turned in the top performance by speeding the 100 yards dash in 8.4 secs. to equal the world record. He had a tail wind too strong to let the mark go as official.

Harrison Dillard, a Negro of Baldwin Wallace, won the qualifying heats in both the low and high hurdles. He covered the 120 yards high in 13.9 secs., equalling the N.C.A.A. record.

Herb McKinley, of the University of Illinois, turned in a 440 time of 46.0 secs.—only 2/10 sec. off the world mark. — United Press.

Horizontal Boxers Spoiled It

London, June 21. Lew Burston, Madison Square Garden foreign envoy currently negotiating a new agreement with British promoter Jack Solomons, brought with him lists of British, French and Belgian boxers who he deems will put international boxing back on the map.

So far as Britain is concerned, the bottom has been knocked out of the boxing market with British defeats from hard punching Americans.

Burston said today that for a year he had kept a card index of young British, French and Belgian fighters who had won all along the line in small shows.

He concentrated upon knockout specialists and has a list of 50 British boys whom he will line up while he is here. Jack Solomons, he said, will give the boys a private trout in his own gymnasium. "Any of these boys who look good will be given a chance to show themselves in America," Burston said.

Burton said he will get together with Jack Solomons in London and Joe Longman in Paris to talk about a programme of international matches. — Associated Press.

U.S. Tug Shot Up

Shanghai, June 21.

A band of armed men fired on the U.S. Navy rescue tug "Deliver" on Thursday from the southern shore of the Tsingtao outer harbour. One bullet struck the "Deliver."

A U.S. Navy announcement said the attackers are believed to be Chinese Communists.

The tug withdrew but later returned, accompanied by a destroyer. Several warning shots were fired ashore by the naval craft and a band of 12 men wearing yellow uniforms was driven off. The band was looting a Navy landing float which had broken loose during

Winner Of The Derby

Pearl Diver, a 40 to 1 French entry owned by Baron de Waldner and ridden by G. Bridgland, won the Derby at Epsom on June 7th. The Aga Khan's Migoli was second, and the Maharajah of Baroda's Sayajirao third. The favourite, Tudor Minstrel, was fourth. Pearl Diver, Bridgland up, is seen here being led in by his very happy owner after the race. (Associated Press photo).

England 207 For Two

London, June 21. At the tea interval today, England had scored 207 runs for two wickets in their Test match against South Africa at the Oval.

After losing their opening pair for under 100, the two Middlesex batsmen, Bill Edrich and Denis Compton, took England's score to 207 for two by the tea interval. Edrich had scored 64 not out and completed his thousand runs of the season, while Compton had made 52 not out.

After the luncheon interval, tried to cut Dawson and the ball flew to second slip, where Tuckett nearly dropped it but managed to hug it at his second attempt.

Washbrook must be praised for his fine innings. He made 86 out of 96 in two hours and 20 minutes and hit five fours.

Brilliant

Edrich and Compton then came together and after settling down gave a delightful display of batting against the accurate South African bowling. The large crowd were given a brilliant afternoon's cricket with fine bowling, excellent fielding and superb batting.

Edrich used his feet well against the slow bowlers and although he narrowly missed being stumped one he took the edge off the bowling. Shortly before tea, Compton joined in the fun and hitting three successive balls from Smith to boundary, he not only completed his own 50 but made the stand worth 100 in only 80 minutes.

The Middlesex pair were still together at tea and thanks to this unfinished third wicket stand England were now completely on top. — Reuter.

COUNTY CRICKET

London, June 20. A brilliant innings of 145 not out by Leslie Ames—his fifth century of the season—was the outstanding feature of today's cricket.

At Harrogate, Yorkshire beat Gentlemen of Ireland by 121 runs. Yorks 164 and 161 for three declared (Walker not out 66, Wardle not out 65). Gentlemen of Ireland 92 and 112 (Smalley four for eight).

At Southampton: Match between Hampshire and Northamptonshire abandoned owing to rain. Hampshire 434 for nine declared. Northants 316 for six (Childs-Clarke not out 61).

At Cardiff: Glamorgan beat Essex in a innings 53 runs. Glamorgan 442. Essex 216 and 173 (Jones four for 30).

At Manchester: Lancashire

batted Cambridge University by 31 runs. Lancs 270 for five declared and 180 for two declared (Howard 62, G.A. Edrich not out 83). Cambridge 191 and 228 (Willatt 100, Cranshaw five for 38).

At Guildford: Surrey drew with Sussex. Surrey 254 (Waites 50, Carey six for 80). Sussex 301 and 230 for six. — Reuter.

Getting Worse

New York, June 20. A Wall Street Journal article by William Henry Chamberlain observes: "While the clash between Chinese and Outer Mongolian troops in Sinkiang seems to be subsiding into the proportions of a normal border incident, the military position of the Chinese government forces in Manchuria and North China appears to be deteriorating rapidly... in keeping the main railway lines open in face of continual Communist guerilla attacks."

"The prospect for China seems to be a protracted and destructive civil war which will set back sorely needed economic recovery and final rehabilitation indefinitely." — United Press.

Bowls

Playing the twice-postponed game at Cox's Path, the Kowloon Bowling Green Club "B" yesterday defeated the Craigengower Cricket Club "B" by nine shots in the first round of the Knockout Competition.

The match, on the whole, lacked excitement with scores on individual heads on the low side. The best show was by Duncan's rink, who chalked up a four on the third and twelfth heads.

With the score at 25-11 against them on the 20th head, Medina's men reduced Cheeseman's victory by four shots in the final head. The results were as follows:
